Edwards' Fate Rests With 'Tragedy' Jury

Judge Directs Verdict of First Degree Murder or Acquittal.

Prosecutor Calls Defense 'All Lies'

Wound on Girl's Head Is Point of Contention in Summation.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 5 (AP).—The case of Robert Allen Edwards, charged with slaying his neighborhood sweetheart, Freda McKechnie, went to the jury tonight after Judge W. A. Valentine instructed the jurors they could return one of two verdicts—conviction or acquittal on a first-degree murder indictment.

"If the defendant was telling the truth, that Miss McKechnie was dead before he struck her with the blackjack, then he should be acquitted," the judge told the jurors.

"It is for you to determine whether the wound upon the head of Freda McKechnie was inflicted after death, or whether it was inflicted while she was alive, or caused and contributed to her death."

"Send him to eternity," District Attorney Thomas Lewis demanded of the jury in his summation.

Any verdict other than outright acquittal "would be a gross miscarriage of justice" in the case of an "innocent man," chief defense counsel Frank McGuigan asserted.

State Charges Murder.

The State charged that Edwards, 21-year-old mine surveyor, beat Miss McKechnie into unconsciousness with a blackjack and left her in Harveys Lake to drown, so that he could marry Margaret L. Crain, East Aurora, N. Y., music teacher.

Edwards was the principal witness in his own defense, contending that Miss McKechnie was killed accidentally, and that he was in a panic when he struck her to "make it look like an accident."

Edwrads' letters to Miss Crain, the court said, were introduced to show the relations existing between them and because the "Commonwealth contends the defendant's love and affection for Miss Crain was the motive for the slaying of Miss McKechnie. Just as the jury filed out of the room, the court room heard that the mother of Juror William Fahey was dying. Fahey wsa not told of her condition.

Judge Valentine began his charge at the opening of the evening session after opposing counsel had concluded their summations in the afternoon.

"The most dastardly and cruelest crime in the history of Luzerne County," District Attorney Thomas Lewis termed Freda's death.

"Lies, lies, lies," he characterized Edwards' defense that Miss McKechnie was killed accidentally by falling against a boat.

"On evidence as firm as bedrock, bring in a verdict of acquittal," countered Frank McGuigan, chief defense counsel.

Characterizing the Commonwealth's case as "suspicion and circumstantial evidence so weak, it has pernicious anemia," McGuigan hammered at the testimony of the prosecution's medical experts.

He stressed that one of these attributed Freda's death to "traumatic shock" while the other testified she died from a "blow that would fell an ox."

Laundress Weeps Because Daughter Marries Rich Man

East Norwich, N. Y., Oct. 5 (U.P.).—A Long Island laundress sat at home weeping tonight because her only daughter had married into the socially prominent Harriman family of New York City.

Miss Mary Maloney became the bride of Charles Carey Rumsey, jr., in a ceremony at Grace Church there. The wedding was immensely pleasing to Mrs. Charles Carey Rumsey, mother of the bridegroom and daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, railroad magnate.

Yet Mrs. Hilda Maloney, who earns her living with a washboard, wept at her home because her daughter had become a modern cinderella.

"There was just the two of us together," she sobbed. "Now I'll be alone and I don't know what I'll do."

Mrs. Rumsey founded the Junior League 31 years ago.

Edna Bancroft Wins Alimony From Actor

Los Angeles, Oct. 5 (AP).—George Bancroft, screen actor, today was ordered to pay $20 a week temporary alimony and $1,750 attorney's fees to Edna Brothers Bancroft, whom he married 17 years ago, pending Bancroft's appeal from a previous order requiring him to pay $4,000 in fees for her lawyer.

Mrs. Bancroft recently appeared in Los Angeles and announced herself as the wife of the actor. She filed suit for separate maintenance from him, although Bancroft is married to Octavia Broske Bancroft and has a daughter by her.

'Daffy' Dean Baffles Tigers, St. Louis Wins 3d Game, 4-1

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post.)

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Oct. 5.—The junior partner of the firm of Dean Brothers, St. Louis distributors of grief for American League fans, today dispensed a bitter dose to the Detroit Tigers in this third game of the World Series. Paul Dean met his first World Series test with a pitching masterpiece that resulted in a 4-to-1 victory for the Cardinals.

Thus the American League standard bearers, placed on a diet of Deans in two of the first three games of the series, find themselves facing the fourth game tomorrow with a 2-to-1 deficit and the Cardinals overwhelming favorites.

Manager Mickey Cochrane, of the Tigers, tonight indicated he would turn to his rookie pitcher, Eldon Auker, in an attempt to stem the Cardinal surge tomorrow, and place the series once more on an even basis. With his one-game advantage, Manager Frisch's choice of pitchers is easier. He can afford to gamble with the big right-hander Tex Carleton, who doubtless will get the assignment.

Even as his loquacious brother Dizzy turned the Tigers back in the opening game, Paul Dean whipped them today. Whipped them even more completely than did the senior member of this amazing brother act that lifted the Cardinals to their stirring National League pennant triumph.

St. Louis, to the number of 34,073 fans, thronged quaint Sportsman's

Four Alienists Call Lindbergh Suspect Sane

Fifth Withholds Opinion; 15 Letters Blast at Defense Alibi.

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the German carpenter accused of extorting the $50,000 ransom in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, was pronounced sane late today by four alienists who examined him for New York and New Jersey authorities.

A fifth psychiatrist, representing the defense, did not join the other doctors in signing the announcement, nor did he express any opinion on the case.

"After a thorough examination of Bruno Richard Hauptmann," said the alienists' report, "we have come to the conclusion that he is sane and that there is no evidence indicative of any previously existing mental disorder.

"The patient's intelligence, judgment and memory, his knowledge of the difference between right and wrong, of the relationship between cause and effect, and his understanding of the nature and quality of his acts are, in our opinion, all normal."

Long Test Ended.

The statement was issued through District Attorney Samuel J. Foley, of the Bronx, after the quintet had concluded lengthy tests on the prisoner.

It was signed by Drs. James B. Spradley and James A. Connelly, who had been chosen by New Jersey authorities, and Drs. S. Philip Goodhart and Richard H. Hoffman, representing Foley. Dr. James H. Huddleson was the defense representative.

Foley also announced that the four who signed the report had requested permission to make a test of Hauptmann's spinal fluid, but that Dr. Huddleson objected.

While the defense obtained a court order requiring Foley to show cause Monday why Hauptmann's counsel should not see the grand jury minutes of his indictment, 13 letters, written in German, were turned over to authorities by Max Falek, a Bronx delicatessen store proprietor.

Written by Fisch's Brother.

They were written to Hauptmann, Foley said, by Pincus Fisch, of Dresden, Germany, a brother of the man who the prisoner declares gave him the money later identified as part of the ransom. The brother was Isador Fisch, now dead.

The letters, the district attorney announced, told of Isador's death and requested detailed information about Hauptmann's business relationship with him.

"The letters indicate that Fisch gave little or no information to his

2 D. C. Banks Plan Dividend Of $585,000

Northeast and Seventh St. Savings Make Second Pay-off Soon.

Second dividends totaling more than $585,000 for depositors of the Northeast and Seventh Street Savings Banks were announced yesterday by Norman R. Hamilton, receiver for these and three other closed banks of Washington.

Mr. Hamilton said a dividend of 25 per cent, of $267,558, had just been authorized for 7,515 depositors of Northeast Savings Bank. Fifty per cent of the deposits of this institution, or $535,116, was made available when it became a part of Hamilton National Bank plan in September, 1933.

Checks are being drawn already for the additional dividend, and date of payment will be announced in a few days. Northeast Savings Bank depositors will be paid at its former banking house, Eighth and H streets northeast.

4,037 Others to Collect.

A dividend of 30 per cent has also been authorized for Seventh Street Savings Bank depositors. This, amounting to $318,718, will be paid to 4,037 depositors probably this month. This bank made available a 50 per cent dividend, or $531,197, when it became a part of the plan creating the Hamilton institution.

Mr. Hamilton recalled that recently 2,010 depositors of the Washington Savings Bank received a 20 per cent dividend, of $72,819. This was in addition to an initial dividend of 50 per cent, or $182,049, for this, another Hamilton Bank plan component.

Relative to the Potomac Savings and District National Banks, for which Mr. Hamilton is also receiver, it was stated that new appraisals of assets of the former are being made with a view to making further distributions to depositors. This probably will be accomplished through a Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan, which made second dividends for the other institutions possible.

A second dividend for District National Bank depositors is being planned, but is being delayed, in

President Grant's Crew Stages Hongkong Riot

Hongkong, Oct. 5 (AP).—Rioting broke out today between union and nonunion members of the crew of the liner President Grant and three persons were injured seriously.

Hongkong police charged into the melee using their batons freely and made several arrests. The President Grant was berthed at the Kowloon docks at the time.

Sulphur-Treated Seawater Yields Tiny Golden Nugget

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—Recovery of the first actual gold and silver ever taken from sea water, tapping the storehouse of metal everywhere dissolved in ocean water, was announced here tonight by Dr. Willard H. Dow, of the Ethyl-Dow Chemical Co.

This first precious sea-water metal is a tiny nugget, one-tenth of a milligram, no bigger than the head of a pin. It is half gold and half silver.

It is part of the gold and silver in 12 tons of sea water which was run through the sea-water bromine plant, near Wilmington, of the company.

The water yielded up part of its gold and silver by a treatment with colloidal sulphur. This sulphur dissolved in the water and when it settled out, like a sediment, it carried the long-sought precious metals.

The gold in this first tiny nugget represents about one three-hundredth part of the yellow metal which the spectroscope indicates exists in the same 12 tons of water. The recovered gold is equal to one-hundredth of one part in a billion of the water. The spectroscope shows the total gold percentage is 2.3 parts in a billion.

The silver is present in larger quantities. If the spectroscope is right, there is enough gold in seawater to pave the United States and enough silver to roof the world.

Dr. Dow said this sulphur treatment is not the start of a commercial gold recovery program, but a scientific experiment to explore possibilities.

Headquarters Raided, Gambling King Seized

Police yesterday raided what they termed "the most completely equipped track information distribution center" in their war on gambling. Police and the photographers say that the man under the raincoat is Sam Beard, on the way to being booked on two gambling charges.

Police struck at the heart of race horse gambling in the District yesterday afternoon, arresting one of the Capital's best-known gamblers and dismantling one of the most completely equipped track information distribution centers ever uncovered here in a spectacular raid on the fifth floor of the Mather Building at 916-18 G street northwest.

Sam Beard, whom Lieut. George Little, gambling squad chief, described as "the biggest race gambler in the business," was held under $10,000 bond on two gambling charges.

Held under similar charges with bonds set at $2,000 each were 12 other men, captured when a police raiding squad of eight chopped its way through a series of locked doors in a surprise move against the establishment. It had been operating under the name of the National Amusement Co.

Lieut. Little described the haul as the biggest since the police took over the General News Co. here last April. He said the National Amusement Co. was the successor to the General News Co. in disseminating race track information and accepting and placing bets.

In one large room of the establishment the raiders found nearly a score of phones lining the walls on three sides, each phone connect-

Owners Fight Land 'Seizure' For U. S. Park

Injunction Sought to Block Title to Properties in Virginia.

An injunction to restrain Secretary of the Interior Ickes from accepting from Virginia the title to two tracts of land, aggregating 659 acres, that are included in the 172,000-acre Shenandoah National Park was sought in the District Supreme Court yesterday by the owners of the tracts.

One owner, Robert H. Via, of Hershey, Pa., was described as having 154 acres situated in Albemarle County, while the owners of the other piece, John J. Mace and Charles M. Mace, coheirs of the estate of John M. Mace, control 505 acres in Rockingham County.

Through their attorneys, the complainants said they were being offered inadequate prices for their land. They complained that the laws of Virginia had not been followed by the State authorities in condemning the property without notice to them and without giving them an opportunity to be heard.

A suit is to be filed in the Federal Court of the Western District of Maryland challenging the validity of the laws under which the property was condemned by Virginia. Cancellation of tiles acquired by the State commission on conservation and development also will be sought.

Owners' Charges.

Officials in charge of purchasing the individual tracts that go to make up Shenandoah Park have expended almost $2,000,000 buying up land. Title to the whole has been placed in the State commission on conservation and development, and that commission had taken tentative steps to present title to Secretary Ickes so that the Federal Government can maintain the site as a National park.

Via charged that his 154 acres had been taken from him for $3,230. He said there were valuable timber plots, grazing land and extensive orchard trees included in the land that was condemned by Virginia for inclusion in the park region.

The Mace property, for which a price of $2,331.50 was paid, was described by its owners as consisting of valuable timber lands and a mineral spring that has a capacity of 2,400 gallons of water a day. The water, it was said, was bottled and sold for $1 a gallon. It is known as Fountain of Youth Mineral Water.

Coombs, Former Envoy To Japan, Dies in West

Napa, Calif., Oct. 5 (AP).—Frank L. Coombs, 80, former United States Ambassador to Japan and State assemblyman for several seasons, died today. Coombs was graduated from Columbia Law School at Washington in 1875.

He served five terms as State assemblyman. He was appointed by President Harrison as Ambassador to Japan. He was elected to Congress from the Fifth California District.

Farley Casts Pinchot Aside Over Reed Aid

Governor Dropped After Political Somersault to No. 1 Foe.

The wrath of the Roosevelt Administration descended on Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, last night after Pinchot had come out for the reelection of Senator David A. Reed.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, in his role as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, referred to Pinchot's action as a "political somersault" and made it clear that the Administration no longer will be flattered by the Governor's describing himself as a "Roosevelt Republican."

It was with that label that the former Bull Mooser ran against Reed for the Republican Senatorial nomination last spring, a race that was widely regarded as a test of the New Deal.

Enemy No. 1.

In his attack on Pinchot, Postmaster General Farley made it apparent that Senator Reed is enemy No. 1 of the Democrats so far as the November election is concerned. He said that Reed, if elected, will do everything in his power to "make a misdeal out of the New Deal."

Farley's statement, issued after he had talked with President Roosevelt, follows:

"Gov. Pinchot's political somersault is, to say the least, a trifle bewildering. In his speech announcing his return to the Repub-

Floridians Routed As Deluge Blows Inland From Gulf

Pensacola, Fla., Oct. 5 (AP). — A few residents of low-lying areas here were forced from their homes today as the heaviest 24-hour rainfall in the city's history, drives in from the gulf by a tropical storm, reached 17.03 inches at noon.

The deluge diminished after the disturbance had passed inland between here and Mobile. Little damage was reported here, although streets were flooded and many automobiles stranded.

Meanwhile, out in the gulf, south of here, the Coast Guard cutter Saukee was believed to be proceeding toward Mobile again after battling gale winds with a helpless dredge in tow.

Cuba General Strike Called for Tomorrow

Havana, Oct. 5 (AP).—Radical labor leaders in Cuba attempted tonight to coordinate several strike movements with a view to stilling work activity completely Sunday night.

Taxicab drivers and bus operators, who were the first to answer the call, ended their strike after the union leaders set the zero hour for the general strike at midnight Sunday.

Prince Bibesco, Here With Wife, Plans Air Adventure in Secret

Head of Aeronautic Society Reveals That He Intends to Make Flight; Consort Thrilled by View of Washington From Plane.

Prince Bibesco (George Valentin) and his refreshingly continental consort, the Princess Marthe, think they're going to like Washington.

They were comfortably settled in a Mayflower suite last night after their drizzly flight from New York, and with opinions on fashions, the Lincoln Memorial and other things already crystallizing.

Prince Bibesco's mind was mostly on aerial subjects as he and his buoyant wife extended their first interview here. Which is proper enough, since he is president of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale and is here especially to preside over that body's conference next week.

But the princess:

"America is entrancing!" she exclaimed. "Washington is beautiful. I saw the Lincoln monument from the air. It looked like a Greek temple."

And the prince:

"I hope to make a flight——." He checked himself. "I shall tell you," he resumed, "but this is 'entre nous.'" So "entre nous" it must be. But if he carries out the proposed flight—he is a pioneer aviator—it will be a front-page venture.

Again the princess:

"Your women, they are so smart-looking. I noticed them in New York and tonight in Washington as we came into the hotel. That smartness is a good thing," she said with serious mien. "It keeps up industry. If women did not demand beautiful clothes, industry would be

Union Ousting Invalid, Rules Labor Council

Building Unit Is Torn by Dissension as Perkins Predicts Peace.

San Francisco, Oct. 5 (AP).—Internal strife threatening to wreck the American Federation of Labor's building trades department came to a crisis here today after the federation had heard Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins predict a more peaceful future between workers and employers.

The long-smouldering dispute, involving about 800,000 construction unionists, reached a climax when the federation's executive council ruled the recent building trades department convention illegal because it had refused to readmit three "rebel" international unions to membership.

Building trades officers immediately appealed the ruling to the convention, which referred the whole controversy to an adjustment committee.

Would Outlaw Group.

Observers said the ruling, if upheld, would be tantamount to outlawing the present building trades set-up, having a membership of about 400,000.

In such an event, it was said, the "outcast" unions—the carpenters, bricklayers and electrical workers, claiming a membership of around 375,000—would be given the federation's building trades franchise.

Scant hope was held by observers that the adjustment committee would succeed in composing the difficulties.

Another manifestation of spirit cropped out on the floor when Daniel J. Tobin, of Indianapolis, president of the International Teamsters' Union, moved that the verbal attack yesterday on Attorney General

Panama Mob Attacks Police Chief in Killing

Colon, Panama, Oct. 5 (AP).—A mob of Colon residents stoned the home of Chief of Police J. V. Delgado here today after Justo Jaen, 19-year-old Panamanian, was killed while fleeing from the police officer. Chief Delgado took refuge in the United State Government Hotel Washington.

Delgado fired twice into the air and the boy dropped. It was not revealed whether Jaen was shot to death or was killed by falling on jagged stones.

Steel Concern Sues, Charging NRA Is Illegal

Products Boycotted by Presidential Order, Says Jersey Firm.

NRA was assailed as unconstitutional and illegal by W. Ames & Co., steel manufacturers, of Jersey City, in a suit against three Government officials instituted yesterday in District Supreme Court.

The action was regarded as likely to prove a major test of the recovery machinery and of the legality of an order by President Roosevelt prohibiting expenditure of Federal funds on products other than those manufactured by firms complying with code requirements.

Those named as defendants were Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture.

Justice F. D. Letts immediately signed an order requiring the defendants to show cause by October 15 why the plaintiff should not be granted an injunction which would enable it to obtain State and Federal contracts when it is the low bidder.

Illegal Boycott Charged.

One of the principal contentions of the 75-year-old steel company—a comparatively small firm—was that the President's order, issued last March, caused an "illegal boycott" of its products.

The company charged the Executive order resulted in the loss of contracts for at least 1,300 tons of steel, bought for road construction by the State of New Jersey with funds in part obtained from the Federal Government.

Daniel Thew Wright, Washington counsel for the company, reported it had unsuccessfully sought relief from Federal officials.

"Repeatedly," he said, "it has been to the NRA and has been to the Code Authority, has been to the Federal Trade Commission and to the National Recovery Review Board, has protested to the committee on small industries of the NRA, has applied to Secretary Wallace, and while it has been accorded courteous treatment, it has been the courtesy of the executioner."

Has Not Signed Any Code.

At no time, the suit disclosed, has the plaintiff signed the President's reemployment agreement or any code.

NRA codes were attacked as "unconstitutional and illegal" because they permitted code authorities to perform "legislative, judicial and executive" functions; because they regulated matters of production "which, by the ninth and tenth

Mrs. Vanderbilt's Case Delayed Again; Friends Rushing to Aid

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Vanderbilts, the Morgans and the Whitneys gathered again today to resume their legal battle for custody of Gloria Vanderbilt, 10, but unforeseen delays arose and further testimony was postponed until Monday.

Friends of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, mother of the child, were thus given additional time in their race from Europe to help her defend herself against sensational accusations of former servants and other witnesses.

The only witness scheduled was Dr. Stuart L. Craig, who treated the child, heiress to $4,000,000, for what was said to have been hysteria on September 21 at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

In an affidavit, he said he believed Gloria's health would be endangered if she was returned to her mother.

Among those speeding to the aid of Mrs. Vanderbilt were her sister, Lady Furness; her brother, Harry Hays Morgan, jr., and an attorney representing the marchioness of Milford-Haven.

Aligned with Mrs. Whitney, who seeks custody of Gloria on the ground that Mrs. Vanderbilt is an unfit guardian, is Mrs. Vanderbilt's mother, Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, who may be called next week.

She is the only one of the Morgan family siding with the Whitneys. Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, Mrs. Vanderbilt's other sister, has been at her side in court each day.

Justice John F. Carew announced that future sessions will be closed to spectators and newspapermen. Counsel for both sides have expressed themselves as opposed to secret hearings.

1,500 Reds Arrested; Machine Guns Fill Madrid Streets.

Rebels Cut Wires, Halt All Business

Government Airplanes Bomb Strongholds of Radical Forces.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Madrid, October 6 (Saturday).—A violent revolutionary effort to overthrow the government of Spain seemed to be spreading today as the young republic counted its dead in the fighting so far at between 70 and 75.

Reports of fresh clashes and more dead were being received over crippled lines of communication since the government official placed the number dead at 50.

It was estimated 1,500 demonstrators, many of them revolutionists, have been arrested. In Madrid alone 500 have been taken to the police stations. Several hundred were wounded.

It was reported early today that extremists destroyed the Northern Railway line in Corbertoria to prevent mobilization of troops.

Along the railway line connecting Basque provinces, Asturias rebels seized a train and ran it up and down several miles of the line which they had commandeered. Troops blockaded a tunnel, stopping the train, and 50 revolutionists aboard were arrested.

Strike Falls in Seville.

Some regions, however, reported that the revolutionary fervor flaming in central and northern cities had not taken root. From Valencia and Seville it was reported that the general strike had failed. In Bilbao authorities found numerous caches of munitions, but stated there were no serious disorders.

Bilbao police raided a convent, formerly a Jesuit property but now belonging to the government, and found about 100 powerful bombs ready for use, 20 pistols and a supply of ammunition.

In the nearby town of Bermeo extremists raised a red flag and formally declared the existence of a Soviet Republic. Civil guards promptly suppressed this movement.

The new government of Premier Alejandro Lerroux, in office only 24 hours, was watching the situation closely and issued orders that, under martial law, all extremists carrying weapons should be shot. Madrid citizens hurried to their homes as the government declared it could not be responsible for the lives of those on the streets.

The strike and revolution made the sixth major uprising the second Spanish republic has faced since it was founded in May, 1931. Communists, Socialists, and Syndico-Anachists have made common cause against the Conservatives.

Scattered reports indicated that the revolutionary strike had almost completely paralyzed commerce, industry and transportation at many places in Spain.

Ranks of the left Republicans, who Thursday repudiated the new regime, were swelled last night by Miguel G. Maura, outstanding leader who asserted his hostility toward the Lerroux government. Meanwhile the premier, after conferring with cabinet members, declared the government prepared for all emergencies. He said revolution would be suppressed as quickly as it arose.

Prominent left Republican deputies said they would not be surprised if President Niceto Alcala Zamora resigned since, they said, they "couldn't understand how he became involved in a situation which endangered the republican regime."

Streets Ordered Cleared.

Minister of Interior Aloy Alfaro ordered all persons off the streets of Madrid, while soldiers, police and assault guards patrolled the city. Machine guns peered menacingly from the roofs of public buildings, residences and other strategic points and heavy guards protected the homes of members of the government. In several clashes during yesterday and at dusk machine gun and rifle fire rattled through the streets of the capital.

Sharp fighting was reported in Asturias, described as paralyzed by the strike. Twenty guardsmen were reported killed there in addition to the unknown casualties suffered by the rebels.

Other fighting occurred at Eibar,

Mason Is Crushed To Death by Slab

A falling piece of stone at the new Labor Department Building, 1300 C street northwest, yesterday fatally injured George McDonald, 26, of the 1200 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest, a stonemason employed on the structure.

Police were told McDonald was fitting the stone into a niche several floors above the street, when he slipped and fell 5 feet to the tier below, the stone tumbling on top of him and crushing him.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he died less than an hour later.

He was employed by the Alexander-Howey Co., contractors.

Audit Arranged To Check Milk Cost in Capital

Dairies Willing to Open Books for Inspection by Federal Agency.

A thorough audit of the books of the local dairies to determine an exact cost of milk distribution in metropolitan Washington is expected to be made shortly by a Federal agency as the result of a demand by two dairies for a showdown on the retail price issue.

Dr. Frederic C. Howe, consumers counsel in the AAA, announced yesterday that he would call a conference early next week to decide what agency should make the audit.

Elwood H. Seal, who as special counsel for the Senate District Committee made a superficial check of local dairy accounts, said he would welcome a thorough audit, explaining that he had "merely scratched the surface."

Representatives of the Chestnut Farms, Chevy Chase and the Thompson Dairies, together with the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, suggested the audit at conference in Dr. Howe's office. The dairies offered to open their books to any accredited Governmental agency.

The Federal Trade Commission, the General Accounting Office, and the District Government will send representatives to a parley early next week to decide what agency should make the audit.

It was suggested at the previous meeting that accountants from the AAA be assigned to the Federal Trade Commission to do the work.

Dr. Howe said that he had received no word from the other local dairies as to whether they would open their books voluntarily, but he said had no reason to believe they would not.

The reason for the offer of the two large dairies to make public their accounts, it was said authoritatively yesterday, is that they believe that adverse criticism has been directed too much at them and that the recent publicity has reduced the consumption of milk.

The milk producers are understood to be demanding an immediate increase in the retail price of milk, while the larger distributors insist that such action would further cut the local milk consumption.

Citizens Plan Torch Parade

Hillcrest Association to Celebrate Opening of Alabama Ave.

The Hillcrest Citizens Association will put on a real old-fashioned celebration with a torchlight parade Monday night, marking the official opening of newly paved Alabama avenue.

Miss Nancy Lee Faucett, daughter of the Rev. Glenn B. Faucett, pastor of East Washington Baptist Church, will cut the tape officially opening the street. Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of highways, will speak.

Following the parade, exercises will be held in front of the reviewing stand at Good Hope road. A dance then will be held in Stanton school.

The District Commissioners and a number of other District leaders have been invited. The parade will feature a number of bands, floats and uniformed marchers.

Hostesses for the parade include Mrs. George Absher, Mrs. Rudolph Malth, Mrs. Russell Hickernell, Mrs. Otho R. Smith, Mrs. Charles E. Foster, Mrs. C. A. Brode, Mrs. Hames B. Reed, Mrs. Vernice Absher, Mrs. J. J. MacGregor and Mrs. Robert W. Worrell.

Pinchot Dropped For Backing Reed

lican party, he proclaimed his high regard for and deep confidence in President Roosevelt and the President's policies. I wonder how he reconciles this with his definite purpose to aid in the reelection as United States Senator of David A. Reed, who is perhaps the most outstanding foe of the President's policies and who will, if he is reelected—which I am sure he will not be—do everything in his power to hamper the President's program and to make a misdeal out of the New Deal.

"Gov. Pinchot assured his hearers that the Republican party in Pennsylvania had been purged of the influence of the reactionary hierarchy of Republicanism in the Keystone State. I just wonder if he thinks that Senator Reed, who has always been the spokesman and attorney for Andrew W. Mellon, and Lobbyist Joe Grundy has been similarly purged.

Guffey Question.

"I likewise wonder how it is that Joseph F. Guffey, who was a high-class, upstanding citizen when he and Pinchot were in cooperation, suddenly became a deep-dyed villain when he became a candidate for the Senate against David Reed. The latter, incidentally, I understand, was the attorney for Mr. Guffey in the litigation to which Gov. Pinchot referred in his speech.

"I personally have no information as to the story also mentioned by the Governor as to his one-time desire for Democratic indorsement of his then-suggested candidacy for the Senate. All I know about it is the story printed in yesterday's paper, in which George H. Earle, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, narrated with considerable detail that the Governor had asked him to desert Guffey and support Gifford Pinchot as the Democratic candidate for the Senate. As to the mention of me personally, it is part of my job as National chairman to incur the displeasure of Republicans, so naturally the circumstance that Gov. Pinchot holds me in disesteem will not cost me many hours of sleep."

New Dealers Shelve Reform Ideas for More Urgent Job of Putting Idle to Work.

By Raymond Clapper

NEW DEALERS are laying their reform ideas on the the shelf. They still believe in these reforms and they give way reluctantly. But they have a more urgent job. It is to put the nine or ten million unemployed, or whatever the number is, back to work. That is a responsibility they can not escape. Therefore that task rapidly is taking the right of way.

Some of the most advanced reformers in the Administration, for instance, are about to drop the idea of immediate action on unemployment insurance. They believe in unemployment insurance. But it will not help the unemployed at the moment. It can help men and women only after they go back to work. Meantime it loads an additional burden on industry. Furthermore, if unemployment insurance were voted now, the public might get the idea that the relief problem had been solved and balk at further relief expenditures. The idea has not been dropped finally but it is on the way out.

Not so with old-age pensions. They would take care of some of those now on relief. Therefore the disposition is to push this means of giving security to one section of the population.

* * * *

From now on two aims will be placed above all others: 1. Putting unemployed back to work. 2. Feeding those out of jobs.

If a theory gets in the way of doing this it will be just too bad for the theory.

Pressure is on to do the job by the cheapest means, which is the dole. Secretary of the Interior Ickes did not make a hit in some quarters when he said the other day that he wanted more important money for public works. Opposition is growing to further expenditures for projects that will be useless for years to come. Dollar for dollar it is an expensive way to put men to work because so much money must go into material although, through fabrication of these materials, it is true, there is considerable indirect employment.

The rapidly growing pressure for curtailing Federal expenditures is causing worry in Administration quarters. It has been coming from business men. Now it is spreading and reached the point where, even in Georgia, Gov. Talmadge was able to commit the Democratic party to a sharp rebuke of the spending policy.

While Postmaster General James A. Farley now doubts whether the party will lose any seats in the House and is sure it will gain in the Senate, such a so-called vindication of the New Deal will not mislead the Administration. It knows a storm is blowing up and is acting accordingly. The starry-eyed brain trusters have become sobered by a year and a half of responsibility. They are not worried by "left" and "right" tags. What they want is results. They have to have them.

The Administration took the wind out of the sails of subsidized ship owners when the Postoffice Department opened its investigation of ocean mail contracts. It produced a letter from Secretary of the Navy Swanson which stated that of 293 ships operating under subsidy, only 58 could be considered convertible naval ships. This was a blow to the ship owners, who had been prepared to justify the subsidies on the ground that their ships were useful war-time auxiliaries.

One newspaper reporter unwittingly put it straight up to President Roosevelt at yesterday's press conference when he asked:

"Mr. President, have you taken a hand in the bombings of Japanese ranchers in Arizona?"

After the laughter subsided, President Roosevelt pleaded not guilty.

Curtains have been drawn around the NRA goldfish bowl. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson went the limit with a stream of publicity that would have made a circus press agent envious. The new administrative board has gone to the other extreme. Its members are close-mouthed and secrecy is the rule. They've gagged the Blue Eagle.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace found himself in a tight spot when he objected to revealing in District Supreme Court the data on which AAA based its sugar quotas. He said at first it would not be in the public interest to disclose the basis of the quotas. Later he agreed to reveal it in part. One story is that Hawaii was cut in order to favor Cuba on the theory that in the event of war in the Pacific the Cuban sources would be more dependable than those in Hawaii.

The question raised by Wallace's hesitation to reveal any data on which he based such a vital decision as how much sugar Hawaii should be allowed to produce—a decision which involved the very economic marrow of the islands—goes to the heart of the vast discretionary powers lodged with the executive officials under recovery legislation. When Congress decides upon a policy it is only after full, public debate in which all facts and arguments are laid bare. If policy making is delegated to an executive official, the obligation would seem to go with it to similarly reveal the basis on which decisions are made. That is, unless democratic processes are being replaced by autocratic ones.

munitions center which the reds captured, only to be evicted by troops; at Bajadoz, where Marguerita Nelken, Socialist woman member of Deputies, led rebels; and at San Sebastian and at other cities.

Catalonia, long agitated by its desire for independence instead of its present autonomy, saw the Separatist flag raised at an estimated ten villages.

Five Towns Taken and Lost.

In addition to Eibar the radicals, in the course of the day, captured five cities and villages, only to lose them all in vigorous fighting with Spain's picked assault guards, police and soldiers. Madrid's General Hospital also was seized by the revolutionaries and converted into an impromptu fort, around which the battle surged.

The rebellious strikers directed their first efforts at communications, cutting main telephone and telegraph wires at many points and calling out unions of workmen employed in subways, street cars, taxis and railroads.

The government fought their efforts with special strike-breaking squads, and sent conveyances out with armed guards.

Airplanes roared over towns taken by the rebels, bombarding Asturias heavily. In that province, reports reaching the capital said, radicals were assembling in the mountains to gather fighting equipment from caches established by their leaders.

A squadron of airplanes also aided two regiments of mountain troops and assault guards to recapture Eibar, held vital to the government because of the huge supplies of arms and munitions it contained.

How many were killed by the bombs dropped from airplanes in Asturias and other rebellious sectors was not known. The aviators were under orders to bombard all extremist concentration points.

Alfonso Will Return If Called by Spain

Paris, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Former King Alfonso was represented today as "never having renounced the throne of Spain." He will not return, his monarchist advisers said today, unless he is recalled by the monarchists of Spain.

Alfonso and his daughters are traveling in Italy.

Shopkeeper Shoots Youth in Robbery

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—Hade Shoemaker, 18, was shot through the right leg by W. C. Lonas while allegedly robbing the latter's store at Mount Jackson, 12 miles south of here, at 2:30 this morning.

According to Lonas, Shoemaker was accompanied by two brothers, Lee and Noah, who got away. Lonas stated he shot point blank at Lee several times. Noah is believed to be heading for the West Virginia line and officers there have been notified to be on the lookout for him.

Hade is wanted by West Virginia officers as a suspect in the burning of a building there a year ago.

2 Charged With Perjury As Assault Case Fails

Because of their failure to identify a man whom they had charged with assault, Earl W. Anderson, 27, of the 1200 block of N street northwest, and James B. Smith, 21 of the 1100 block of Thirteenth street northwest, were charged yesterday with perjury.

Assistant District Attorney Irving Goldstein charged that the men had sworn to a complaint against Charles O'Brien, of the 1500 block of K street, and then failed to identify him as their assailant.

Ghost?

Movie Actress Reported Slain Appears.

Los Angeles, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—The story of a friend that Gladys Feely, 23, movie extra player and artists' model, had been slain by a gang of colored men who held both girls captive, "blew up" today when Miss Feely appeared at a police station alive and well and expressed surprise at the report.

The story of the slaying was told by Irene Willard, 26, who said she and Miss Feely were drugged during a slumming trip Tuesday night and woke up captives of several colored men.

Miss Willard, who said she escaped after being attacked, said "I guess I made a mistake. I thought it was Miss Feely, but it must have been someone else."

Tennessee Head Urged To Prevent Bull Fight

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Telegraphic protests today urged Gov. McAlister to intervene to prevent a bull fight at Knoxville, but the Governor's office reported he was not informed that one was to be held.

From Sydney H. Coleman, of New York, president of the American Humane Association, came an appeal that the Governor "refuse official permission to hold such contest."

Radio to Link D. C., Palestine As Jews Meet

Women's Zionist Group to Hold Parley Here From October 14 to 16.

An international radio hookup over the National Broadcasting Co., linking Washington with Jerusalem and all parts of the United States, will be a feature of the twentieth annual convention of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, at the Wardman Park Hotel from October 14 to October 16.

The radio program, which is scheduled for 9:30 a. m. on the convention's final day, will relay ceremonies in connection with the corner stone laying of Palestine's first medical center on Mount Scopus, in Jerusalem.

Mrs. Alexander Lamport, chairman of the convention committee, yesterday announced Miss Henrietta Szold, founder of Hadassah; Dr. Judah L. Magnos, chancellor of the Hebrew University, and J. Hathorn Hall, chief secretary of the Government of Palestine, will participate in the overseas broadcast.

All Nation Can Hear Program.

Mr. Hall will represent Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope, high commissioner, now in London. The coast-to-coast network will carry the program to all parts of the Nation.

Cornerstone exercises in Jerusalem will inaugurate for Hadassah a new phase in medical and public health work, Mrs. Lamport declared. Such an enterprize has been conducted by Hadassah in Palestine for 22 years.

More than 1,500 delegates and visitors are expected to attend the sessions.

The architectural and scientific plans for the medical center and its social significance for Palestine will be presented in addresses by Dr. Ratnoff, Dr. J. J. Golub, Dr. Emanuel Libman, Mrs. Felix M. Warburg, Mrs. Edward Jacobs, Mrs. Moses P. Epstein, Dr. Israel S. Wechsler, professor of clinical neurology at Columbus University; Dr. Ira I. Kaplan, and Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, president of the American Friends of the Hebrew University.

On the first night of the convention, a mass meeting will be held, at which Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of the Free Synagogue, will be the principal speaker. At one of the sessions, Morris Rothenberg, president of the Zionist Organization of America, will bring greetings.

Mrs. Samuel W. Halprin, National president of Hadassah, will open the convention, and Mrs. Leopold W. Freudberg, president of the Washington chapter, will welcome the delegates.

One of the sessions will be addressed by Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the Jewish National Fund. An expanded educational program to be carried out in this country will be proposed for ratification.

Steel Plant Sues; Calls NRA Illegal amendments to the Constitution of the United States, are reserved to the States or the people;" because they regulated labor matters in alleged violation of the ninth and tenth amendments to the Constitution; because they "require the surrender of liberty and property without due process of law," and because they "require the assignment of rights of action" to the treasurer of the American Iron and Steel Institute or to a representative of the Concrete Reinforcing Steel Institute.

The suit also charged that the codes define and make punishable unfair practices without "authority to legislate;" because they are granted "inquisitorial powers" in alleged violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution; because the codes "purport to reserve to the President the power to rewrite the agreement of one joining the code and then hold such party bound by an obligation he never assumed," and because the codes delegate power to regulate intrastate commerce in alleged violation of the ninth and tenth amendments to the Constitution.

Recovery Act Assailed.

The suit charged the recovery act itself was unconstitutional as "a mere device to coerce this plaintiff, among others similarly situated, to act as Congress and the President wish them to act in respect of matters completely the business of the State government under the Federal Constitution."

The suit protested that the President's order was illegal because it imposed conditions "not authorized by Congress" and because it "discriminates between citizens of the United States."

One of the contentions of the company was as follows:

"On information and belief that on or about April 12, 1934, an agency of the United States, namely, the Federal coordinator of transportation, Hon. Joseph B. Eastman, did recommend to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, then and there being administrator for industrial recovery, that he make exception in the specific case of W. Ames & Co. from the operation and effect of said Executive order No. 6646.

"That thereafter this plaintiff diligently urged upon said administrator and upon subordinates of said administrator that said administrator make such exception, but that finally, and on or about September 4, 1934, said administrator denied exception to this plaintiff and in so doing ruled as follows:

"'As Mr. Frank Healey, chief Government contracts branch, has written you in his letter of August 31, the established policy as to exceptions from the operation of Executive order No. 6646 is to grant these only when the work to be performed or material supplied are necessary to the proper functioning of the Government, and it is impossible to secure them from any source which can furnish the certificate of compliance.'"

Young D. C. Democrats Proclaim Truce in War

'Everything Is Lovely,' Member of One Club Reports; Accord Marks End of Prolonged Strife Within Ranks.

By Robert C. Albright.

Washington's Young Democrats, who have been fighting among themselves ever since the Roosevelt Administration moved into Washington, have agreed not to disagree.

The white flag of truce yesterday was waved by the once embattled factions, as members of three organizations of Democratic young people hove to in the face of the oncoming campaign.

No formal armistice has been signed and each of the groups still goes its own way under a separate constitution and by-laws.

But the feud that split their ranks three ways within a month after President Roosevelt took office has been quietly laid on the shelf. There have been informal talks among members looking to an amalgamation. Democracy's youth has buried its hatchet.

"You can say that everything is lovely now," said Victor Russell, who headed the Young Democrats Club of Washington when the air was full of the cats and dogs of internal strife.

"We haven't merged our clubs, and it may be we never shall, but there is only the friendliest feeling between the organizations, and so far as our group is concerned, the war is over."

The trouble all started over revision of the constitution of the Young Democrats Club of America, details of which most members couldn't explain now if they tried.

The National organization wanted to centralize control in a single committee, approved by chairmen of State Democratic committees and the National committeemen from each State.

When the Young Democrats Club of Washington refused to approve it, seven members withdrew, set up the District of Columbia branch of the Young Democrats Club of America, and ratified the constitution.

In the raging battle of statements that followed, the name of Postmaster General Farley was dragged into the quarrel. Seceding members claimed Farley approved their constitution. A campaign was launched and membership in the new unit quickly ran up to over 1,000.

Last winter under quieter auspices, Wilbur Heakin, a member of the parent club, organized a third organization—the Capitol Hill Young Democrats Club. There were no fireworks there. Heakin said he formed the group merely for the convenience of members.

So now there are three organizations in the Washington field—The Young Democrats Club of Washington, the District branch of the Young Democrats of America, and the Capitol Hill Young Democrats. Carl Schedler heads the first group, Ray Walters the second, and Heakin the third.

None of the original officers of the two warring factions holds office now, and everybody is on speaking terms again.

Maybe the Congressional campaign has something to do with it. The members of all three factions are "doing their bit" by volunteering for service with the Democratic National committee.

Baltimore Flings A $150 Lion Right Back at N. Y. Zoo

Baltimore, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Baltimore had a chance to buy a genuine New York lion today for $150—a very cut rate—but it looks as if the city budget won't be able to stand the pressure.

The lion, product of New York's Central Park Zoo, is six years old and never saw a jungle. New York Zoo men give him a good recommendation, however.

The low price was conditioned on a good home for Akbar, the lion, and Baltimore's Druid Hill Zoo appeared to fill the bill. But the zoo already has three lions and needs the $150.

Gift Window Is Dedicated

Is Memorial to Former Congressman John Linthicum.

A memorial window in memory of the late John Charles Linthicum, once member of Congress from Maryland, was dedicated at a special service in the Church of the Epiphany yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Linthicum attended the church during his service in Congress, and the window is a gift of his widow.

Assisting the rector, Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, in the service were the Right Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Bishop of Maryland, and the Rev. Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving, rector of St. Paul's Church in Baltimore.

The window, the work of the D'Ascenzo Studios, of Philadelphia, is done in a medieval style of symbolism, and depicts the ministry of Christ. The topmost medallion gives the Greek letters Chi Rho, the symbol of Christ the Anointed. The rosette below is the baptism of Jesus by St. John the Baptist in the Jordan River. The two panels show St. Matthew and St. Mark, while scrolls behind them give the opening words of their Gospels. Beside the two apostles are the Man and the Lion, symbols characteristic of the two.

The inscription of dedication at the bottom of the window reads, "To the Glory of God and in loving memory of John Charles Linthicum by his loving wife, Helen A. Linthicum."

Black to Press 30-Hour Week In New Session

Action More Drastic Than NRA Needed to Cut Idle Ranks, He Says.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

The battle to impose a 30-hour work week upon American industry will be renewed at the next session of Congress, Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), Alabama, predicted here last night.

The Alabama Senator who guided a 30-hour bill through the Senate in the Seventy-third Congress, still believes the shorter work week to be the Nation's chief hope of thinning the ranks of the unemployed.

Exhausted after weeks of political activities in the South and ordered away from his office by physicians, Black, at his home, outlined his views on social and labor legislation needed to facilitate economic recovery.

Drastic Measures Needed.

"I still believe the shorter work week would solve many of our unemployment troubles," Black declared. "I am studying this question and issues involving social legislation which President Roosevelt has promised to send to Congress next year."

He emphasized his belief that the shortening of hours through NRA code provisions had stepped up recovery, but he believes this only scratched the surface of the problem and that more drastic measures are needed.

Despite the strong indorsement given the shorter work week by the American Federation of Labor convention in San Francisco, sources close to the Administration declare Mr. Roosevelt to be opposed now to an inflexible work week. He is said to feel that along with price fixing and production control that the hours question should be worked out with the problems of individual industries in mind.

Housing Drive Starts Monday

First Lady and Moffett to Speak at Inaugural Meeting.

With James A. Moffett, Federal housing administrator, making one of his first public appearances in Washington as a speaker, the District Better Housing Campaign leaders will hold their inaugural meeting in the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce Monday evening.

The principal address will be delivered by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Following her talk, Mr. Moffett will explain various phases of the National housing program. Then he will introduce Albert L. Deane, president of the General Motors Holding Corporation and deputy Federal housing administrator, who will discuss the "modernization" drive in progress throughout the country.

All three speeches will be broadcast. Mrs. Roosevelt is scheduled to begin her talk at 8:30 p. m.

Other speakers include Ward M. Canaday, director of public relations for the Housing Administration, who will talk on Washington's housing problems.

Thomas P. Littlepage, general chairman of the Washington Better Housing Campaign, also will deliver an address on how Washington can be benefited by the project.

The gathering is open to the public, and will signalize local participation in the National housing program. Many high Government and District officials will attend.

Price-Fixing Voted In Lumber Trade

Codes Authority Decides to Retain Provisions.

Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Lumber Code Authority decided today to retain minimum price provisions in the industry's code and to see that they are enforced.

The authority, supervising one of the largest industrial units in the Nation, adopted a resolution setting forth this decision on the subject scarcely 24 hours after Donald B. Richberg, new chieftain of recovery policies, had hinted at gradual removal of cost and production control in a Washington address.

A three-day meeting of 500 lumbermen, representing 45,000 units and 87 divisional code bodies, ended with acceptance of the resolution. Those in attendance termed the assembly the largest the timber business has witnessed in many years.

St. Lawrence Pact Faces Amendment

Minor modifications of the St. Lawrence waterway pact, which the Senate rejected last session, will be sought soon in diplomatic conversations with Canada, the Associated Press reported.

It was emphasized, however, that the general principles of the treaty would be retained when President Roosevelt resubmits it to the Senate for approval.

One of the points on which the Republican-Democratic opposition based their arguments in the Senate and which will be taken up with Canada is the one regarding the use of American workmen on the Canadian side of the huge navigation-power project.

A reporter is seen trying to pick up a little local color in the office at the Mather Building raided yesterday in a spectacular attack on what police termed the racing news disseminating center. Scene shows a lull before the police and U. S. marshals began dismantling the place. Police said that nearly a score of phones were connected by direct wires with 60 betting emporiums throughout the District.

Call Goes Out For Volunteers To Help Needy

Street, Urging Formation of Corps, Says Funds Are Insufficient.

Formation of a corps of volunteer workers to give direct personal services to the needy of the National Capital was proposed yesterday by Elwood Street, director of public welfare, in a letter sent to more than a score of prominent men and women.

"With relief funds inadequate to meet the needs of more than 23,000 families now on the rolls of the Emergency Relief Division; with a staff of employed workers inadequate in number and resources to handle effectively all of the financial, personal and community needs of these people, it seems to me that there is a very real opportunity for able men and women possessed of common sense, sympathy and human understanding to render direct personal services which can be of inestimable value to our fellow citizens who are unemployed and in need of relief and varied kinds of assistance," Mr. Street said in his letter.

The plan is to be discussed at an invitation meeting in the board of welfare offices in the District building at 2 p. m. on Wednesday.

The 27 invited have been active in social, civic, club and church work.

"We believe," Mr. Street said, "that a movement so important as this deserves the attention of the most intelligent and best-disposed people of our community."

Those invited to join the formative committee are:

Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, Mrs. Coralie Franklin Cook, Mrs. Harvey Wiley, the Rev. W. L. Darby, secretary, Federation of Churches; George J. Cleary, Miss Anne Carter Green, president, Junior League; Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary, Washington Council of Social Agencies; Arch Mandel, regional director, FERA; Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman, D. C. Meow!

Owner of 8 Cats Defends Yowling Rights.

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 5 (AP).—The question, your honor, is: Do eight cats yowl much louder than five?

"No," said former Justice W. R. Smith today before the State Supreme Court in defending his pets.

City attorneys, upholding the complaint of Smith's neighbor, Archie Smith, said that was beside the case. The city ordinance limiting a household to five cats drew their emphasis.

W. R. Smith argued that the ordinance was unwarranted and if five cats were acceptable that a mere three more made no difference.

The decision will come later.

Wallace Warns Of 10-Cent Corn

Says Price Collapse Faces U. S. Farmers Unless Control Stays.

The prospect of 10-cent corn faces the corn belt in 1935 if the corn-hog production program is abandoned, Secretary Wallace yesterday warned in a radio address over a Nation-wide hook-up.

With a controlled expansion of corn and hog production, he said, the chances are strongly in favor of a continuing march toward parity prices.

"We know now," he added, "that by controlling supply we can affect price. What to most of us had been no more than a theory has suddenly become as real and practical as an everyday farm chore.

"It has not been by chance that corn-hog prices today are twice what they were a year ago last summer. It is by design, by the conscious effort of more than a million farmers working in unison on a self-imposed program."

His address was in connection with the farm poll now being conducted on continuation of the corn-hog production control program.

Sinclair Needs No EPIC Plan, Creel Believes

Candidate's Victory Seen if He Stands on Party's Modified Planks.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Upton Sinclair, erstwhile Socialist, will be elected Governor of California next month provided he stands on the modified Democratic State platform, it was predicted yesterday by George Creel, his defeated primary opponent, following a conference with President Roosevelt.

Contrary to reports reaching the East, which declared that Sinclair won the Democratic State Convention to his EPIC plan, Mr. Creel asserted that "we threw out almost every one of his EPIC planks and got a platform on which every Democrat can stand."

While agreeing to support the former Socialist, Mr. Creel said the convention rejected "his $50 pension plan, the farm communes, the $300,000,000 bond issue, the State stores, and the exemption of homes of $3,000 assessed valuation from taxation.

"There is nothing left of his EPIC plan, except the barter plan and the self-help cooperatives. I could not have swallowed his original platform."

Mr. Creel said he discussed California projects with the President, who, he insisted, is keeping out of California's tangled political situation. Concerning the so-called Left Wing primary victories last month, he said:

"There isn't any Right any more. There's just a vacant space."

Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, according to Mr. Creel, "seems to have swallowed Sinclair pretty whole." He said he did not know whether the Senator, who indorsed the Democratic nominee at the convention, would make any speeches in his behalf.

Man and Woman Held As Gallaher Suspects

Scottsburg, Ind., Oct. 5 (AP).—Sheriff Wilbur Amick, of Scott County, held for questioning today a man and a woman who he said resembled Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Goodrich, sought in connection with the trunk murder in Detroit of 11-year-old Lillian Gallaher.

Sheriff Amick said the man particularly bore a close resemblance to Geodrich.

ed through a series of switches by direct wire to 60 betting places throughout the city.

While Beard, a stout, swarthy man, dressed in light gray suit and cap, looked on solemnly, the police, with the aid of a crew of professional movers, carefully tore out all equipment and carted it to a van.

First went the establishment's office furniture from a room in the front. Then came the phones—police said there were 40 of these, including a spare supply in a rear storeroom—and racing forms, memo pads and desks and chairs from the operations room.

Before this, however, a police photographer made pictures of all salient features of the establishment and a deputy United States marshal took careful inventory of the equipment.

Dodges Photographers.

Beard stuck around, he said, "to see the cops move this stuff," and spent most of his time dodging press photographers who sought to take his picture.

"This is the first time we have ever hit one of these places and taken a real gambler," Lieut. Little said.

Little said he received information on September 15 that the place had gone into operation, getting race track information "bootlegged" by tapping the wires of established news agencies, disseminating it to bookmaking establishment throughout the city and placing bets in wholesale amounts.

He said his information indicated the establishment had been operating only a short time before he was tipped off, and he described the raid as a part of his drive to clean up gambling in the city.

Little said he understood the National Amusement Co. was headed by a man named George Howard, alias Willie Carroll, as president, but he declared he believed Howard was merely the "front" for the real head of the establishment, whom he declared to be Beard.

One Booked as Carroll.

One of those held with Beard was booked by police as William Carroll, 30, of 3106 Connecticut avenue. The others were on the police blotter as George Emmett Hutchins, 43, of 1831 Second street northeast; Joseph Albert O'Calleaghan, 34, of 315 Longfellow street northwest; L. Kaplan, 35, of The Ebbitt Hotel; Fred James Weese, 43, of 618 Ninth street northwest; James Thomas Gallagher, 40, of 2519 H street northwest; Melville George Jacobs, 28, of 623 Concord avenue northwest; John Sartori, 34, of 2535 Thirteenth street northwest; Timothy Harvey Noel, 33, of 1017 New York avenue northwest; Lewis Linback Levy, 45, of 541 Kentucky avenue southeast; William Garland Smith, 41, of 712 Farragut street northwest, and Fred Herman Heck, 44, of 229 Concord avenue northwest.

All are to be arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham Turnage on charges of conspiracy to violate the gambling laws and setting up a gaming table. All were fingerprinted and photographed at headquarters.

Beard, one of the most widely known and colorful figures in Washington sporting circles, was released recently from prison after serving a term for income tax evasion. While he was in jail, burglars ransacked his palatial residence at 7400 Alaska avenue, looting it of many of its valuable contents.

Beard was fined $12,500 and sentenced to serve 18 months in jail in February, 1933, on tax evasion charges covering the years from 1921 to 1928. A certificate was filed in District Supreme Court last February attesting to his payment of $199,185.46 in cash.

Million a Week Mark Is Passed In FHA Loans

10,480 Home Owners on List Thus Far, Moffett Tells Roosevelt.

Confidence that the Federal housing campaign, now just getting under way, will accumulate momentum was expressed by James A. Moffett, housing administrator, in an informal report made public yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Disclosing that 10,480 loans have been made to date, aggregating $4,600,000, Mr. Moffett reported that each day's business shows "an increase of 40 per cent over the corresponding day of the previous week," and is now averaging $1,500,000 weekly.

Operations so far cover only loans for home modernization—the first of the three functions of the housing administration. Regulations governing the insurance of loans for new construction and the set-up of a Federal mortgage corporation will be ready by November 1, the administrator said.

"Considering the short period of time we have been operating," Mr. Moffett reported to the White House, "I think we have made rapid progress and, to my mind, the success of the operation will equal our most optimistic expectations."

Chief purpose of the housing program is to stimulate the lagging construction industry, to return men to work. While conuting on a rapid increase in loans for home modernization, Mr. Moffett said, however, that "no real effect" can be expected from other phases of the housing act until the spring of next year.

The administrator reported that contracts have been sent to 23,000 financial institutions of all types. More than 8,000, or 35 per cent, have been accepted. The loans already made, he said, average $443.

President Roosevelt released the report at the close of a busy day devoted to taking stock of the recovery drive with a lengthy list of callers, including Walter Chrysler, the motor magnate; Gov. George L. Harrison, of the New York Federal Reserve; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the R. F. C., and Attorney General Cummings.

None of the visitors would speak for publication, but it was believed the President touched on his proposed "labor truce" in his conference with Mr. Chrysler. Today Mr. Roosevelt will cast work aside to go aboard the yacht Sequoia for a week-end of rest and fishing down the Potomac.

Firestone Predicts Rubber Price Rise

To Result From Restriction of Output, He Says.

Harvey Firestone, sr., predicted a further increase in the price of rubber yesterday during a visit to the State Department to discuss Liberian affairs, the Associated Press reported.

Firestone said that, as a result of the rubber restriction agreement among the world's largest rubber producing nations, he expected a progressive rise in price.

Firestone, who is particularly interested in Liberia because of his large rubber plantation holdings in that republic, talked with Undersecretary of State Phillips and Harry A. McBride, assistant to the Secretary of State, who has just returned from making a comprehensive survey of conditions in Liberia.

City Symphony Rehearsals Set

Kindler to Direct Initial Practice Tomorrow in Constitution Hall.

Rehearsals for the first concert of the season by the National Symphony Orchestra will begin tomorrow in Constitution Hall, under the direction of Hans Kindler. The opening program, scheduled for Sunday afternoon, October 21, will inaugurate the orchestra's fourth season.

Dr Kindler, who has piloted the orchestra of 80 players during its short and successful career, promises several novelties for the coming series of concerts. Among them are Skryabin's "Divine Poem," the second symphony of Sibelius, the second symphony of Randall Thompson and the new piano concerto by Ravel, with Harold Bauer as soloist. There will be an all-Wagner program, an all-Viennese program, and an all-Russian program, with Mischa Elman as soloist. The season will close, as usual, with a "request" program.

The principal composition for the first concert on October 21 are Dvorak's E minor symphony ("From the New World") and Ravel's picturesque fairy-tale suite, "Ma Mere l'Oye" (Mother Goose).

Insull Defense Fails to Block Utility Records

Trucks Loaded With Data Wheeled Into Court by Prosecution.

Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP).—Winning the first important engagement with the defense, prosecutors today wheeled hand trucks loaded with ledgers and document cases into Federal Court to be used as silent witnesses in the mail fraud case against Samuel Insull, sr., and 16 associates in Insull's giant public utility system.

Detailed questioning from Floyd E. Thompson, of defense counsel, directed at each man who appeared to identify books, was curtailed by Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Had the attack been upheld, United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green would have been forced to bring in scores of other witnesses to testify that the books were authentic.

The men who brought the books into court were brokers and a sprinkling of officials of Insull companies. Using their records, Government accountants will testify to market dealings it was claimed were engineered to keep the market for Insull stocks lively while selling campaigns were under way.

A dozen brokers were heard in the morning session, with 60 or more to come.

Insull, who heard his Corporation Securities Co., of Chicago, called a $100,000,000 swindle yesterday, yawned in his seat.

Mrs. Stanley Field, wife of the Chicago banker on trial with Insull and the others, sat just inside the court rail embroidering. In the press room bailiffs watched a score of the World Series game.

Insull chatted with reporters of the days when he used to be the patron of opera for Chicago. His only comment on the trial was that he was tired of sitting.

Church of Holy Sepulchre

Traveler Tells of Little-Known Phenomenon in Connection With Christendom's Central Shrine; Religion's Mystic Power.

By William T. Ellis.

I know something about the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem that is not known to one out of a hundred thousand visitors to this most venerated shrine in Christendom. I learned it one day when I was a guest of the Greek monks in their residence, high up in the pile of masonry. Imagine my astonishment when I was led out to an open veranda, and found myself under the trellised shade of an old and luxurious grape vine. Puzzled, I sought an explanation of the mystery: for certainly there could not be soil enough on the roof to support such a great and venerable plant.

Then the monks explained. Down in a narrow strip of earth beside the wall, at the level of the old city's streets, the vine was planted. Nobody knew its age: perhaps centuries. But patient care had led the vine up and up—possibly before adjacent structures were built—until it burgeoned in the sunshine above the dank streets of Jerusalem. It was rooted deep in mother earth: it bore its leaves and fruit high up in the light of day. Now it affords shade and refreshment to the monks whose work is in the close and dank depths of the great church below.

Many and various are the lessons of this vine of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre; but the first is that its roots lie deep in the soil of the life-giving earth. Fruitage depends upon rootage. None of the beauty or fruit of the vine would be possible were it not for the sustaining power of that sacred soil. Out of the hidden depths comes the blessing and bounty of the arbor.

Like that vine, lives of power have their roots deep in ground that is not possible from the spots where the fruits are enjoyed. We admire the grace and helpfulness of noble personalities, and do not see the source of their power. It is Christ's own parable of the vine all over again. Christians, with their life and their ministry, are the branches which the world sees; but Christ Himself is the vine, deep growing from the eternal love and purposes of God.

Mystics of Faith.

This familiar figure of the vine is the heart of the farewell talk of Jesus with his disciples, at the Last Supper in the upper room, just before He went out to Gethsemane and the cross. Only John's Gospel quotes them. The three chapters which contain this discourse are the best-thumbed part of every Christian's Bible. They reveal the character of Jesus, and His attitude toward His friends, more profoundly than any other words spoken during His ministry.

"Mysticism!" says the coldly intellectual critic of these best-beloved words. Granted. And the best friends of Jesus have always been mystics. The dictionary defines a mystic as "one who holds to the possibility of direct, conscious and unmistakable communion with God." That should mean all Christians. Certainly it includes a countless multitude from St. Paul downward through the ages, with Thomas a'Kempis a conspicuous example. Some religious denominations, like Quakerism, are founded in the doctrine of mysticism.

As a bald matter of fact, an indisputable point of clear interpretation of the New Testament, this "mystic, sweet communion," between Christ and the Christian is an essential teaching of the New Testament. Without it the sacrament of the Lord's Supper is meaningless. The supreme mystery and might of the Christian religion is that the disciple may personally share the life of the risen Jesus. As our lesson says, "Apart from Me, ye can do nothing." A Christless church and a Christless life are equally impotent spiritually. That is why, in this problem-filled day, countless voices are crying, "Back to Christ!"

Too Much "Religion."

Publicists and politicians are very free nowadays with fervid declarations that our supreme need is for "religion." Some use that word vaguely; others would put into it the whole content of Christianity. "Religion" embraces all sorts of things, from the voodooism of the African jungle to the intellectual teachings of the Society for Ethical Culture. There are scores of "religions" extant today, in various parts of the world. So much of the talk about "religion" is really meaningless.

Only the religion of Christianity is adequate for our troubled time. And only the Christianity that represents vital union with the omnipotent Christ can really function. We need His teachings and His example; but for real empowerment we must have His shared life. Nothing less is equal to our day's desperate demands. His "all power" is imparted to those whose life is united to His life, as the branch is united to the vine.

Around the world, and especially in this country, there is intensifying a bitter clash between conservatives and liberals. Both have programs; but neither has sufficient power. It will take something more than mortal might to make right all that is wrong with society. There is not a political program or philosophy on that horizon that can not be riddled full of holes by those opposed to it. Nothing less than a new and Divine power, the vitalizing force of Christ Himself, operating through men and women who have found in Him life, can make over the existing order. A "revival of religion" is not enough, unless by that phrase we mean the unleashing of Divine power through human lives which are in real union with Jesus. Then, and not until then, may we "ask what we will, and it shall be done unto you." Branches can bear fruit only be remaining on the vine.

Back to First Principles.

Religion, in the Christian sense, is wholly a matter of relationship to Christ. Despite all attempts to water it down into a mere social program, or an ethical or intellectual conception, it remains clear—if the words of the New Testament may be taken at their face value—that it is the personal transaction between a man and his Redeemer that constitutes Christianity. If Jesus Christ means nothing to a person, then Christianity means nothing. The Christian life consists of the disciple's relationship with Christ. Out of that springs all of his service, all of his peace, all of his characteristically Christian qualities.

Blast on Boat Injures Two at D. C. Wharves

Fish Freighter Is Raked by $1,200 Fire After Explosion.

Two men were injured late yesterday when a blast, thought to have been caused by a leaky gasoline tank, partially wrecked the 65-foot fish freighter, Virgie Garrison the Seventh street wharves.

Following the explosion, fire destroyed the hold and did damage estimated at $1,200 to the engines and cabins.

The injured men, E. N. Tyler, a deck hand, and Edward F. Marsh, the cook, were taken to Emergency Hospital. Neither was injured seriously.

The blast occurred when Marsh attempted to light the stove to prepare supper. Fumes from the leaky tank had drifted into the kitchen, Otis Evans, captain and owner of the craft, said. They were ignited by the match.

Evans was leaving the boat at the time. He said the blast shook the craft from bow to stern. The injured men crawled through the dense smoke to the wharf, where they were given first aid and rushed to the hospital.

The Virgie Garrison arrived in Washington from her home port, Rhode Point, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, with a cargo of fish, oysters and clams Wednesday.

Most of her cargo had been sold, and the money from the sales had been stored in the cabin.

After the explosion, Willard Evans, 32, first mate, saw the injured men were safe, then went back aboard the burning boat and rescued the money, about $800 in bills.

Firemen from several companies and aboard the fire boat extinguished the blaze.

Prince Bibesco Prepares Flight

in worse shape than it is—much worse."

Prince Bibesco, whose intensive flying has impaired his hearing, is visiting America for the first time. (Don't confuse him with the former Rumanian Minister to the United States, Antoine Bibesco, who is his first cousin). A winged globe trotter of the first water, he speaks English well and hates steamship travel.

Born inBucharest 54 years ago and grandson of the late reigning Prince George Demetrius Bibesco, he is, however, only half Rumanian. His mother was a Belgian princess, Valentine de Caraman-Chimay. He is head of Rumania's famous Bibesco family and the former Minister to this country is second in command.

Incidentally, neither he nor his wife is related to the royal family, although both are intimate friends of King Carol.

Princess Marthe was 16 and he 24 when they were married. Since 1930, when the prince was chosen president of F. A. I., they have attended together all of its international congresses.

A flying fan ever since 1908, when she visited the Champ d'Auvours to witness Wilbur Wright's first French flight, the princess is not yet a pilot.

"Too short-sighted," she explained dolefully. "I wouldn't be able to tell a cloud from a mountain. But I love to fly. We have made trips all over Europe and to Africa."

The Rumanian Reserve Army colonel, thrice Deputy and once Senator in the Rumanian Parliament, nodded in acquiescence.

He is a greater air enthusiast than ever, although that terrible crash in India 3½ years ago is still fresh in his mind. Flying between Gaya, Bengal, and Allahabad, India, on an official inspection trip, the plane in which he and three others were riding collided with an eagle and came down in flames.

One of the pilots was killed. The other pilot — Prince Bibesco had been flying as a passenger—lost both legs. He is Commandant Georges Banciulesco and is here for the conference. Watching him pass to and fro during last night's interview, one would scarcely have imagined he has artificial limbs.

Former Senator Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronautic Association, led the welcoming party which met the visitors at Washington airport late yesterday.

Upton Sinclair Scraps Radio, Calls Programs 'Buncombe'

Others Urge Reforms at Hearings Before Commission.

Chagrin over "buncombe and rubbish" in many radio programs has inspired Upton Sinclair, former Socialist, and now Democratic nominee for Governor of California, to give away his receiving set.

Lee De Forest, radio inventor, believes many ether programs are nothing but "a huckstering orgy."

American colleges have swung their influence behind a movement to set aside more time on the air to educational programs.

Students can be taught by radio to write on typewriters and sing.

All of which represents a cross-section of the testimony presented so far to the Federal Communications Commission, which yesterday recessed for the week-end its prolonged hearings on future allocation of radio facilities.

Dr. Joy Elmer Morgan, of the National Education Association, read a letter he had received from Sinclair. The Californian wrote:

"If they (present commercially-sponsored programs) are allowed to continue for another 10 years we shall have the most depraved and vulgarized people in the world, and the fault will not rest with the people, who are helpless and have to take what is handed out to them by exploiters and commercialists of the basest type.

Divers Find Hulk They Hope Holds 40 Millions Gold

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—Treasure hunters seeking the 9,600,000 British pounds (approximately $40,000,000) the ship Hussar supposedly was carrying when she sank in the East River in 1780 believed today they had found timbers of the vessel.

Two expeditions are sending divers down into the muddy depths of the river for the wreckage of the Hussar, which plunged to the bottom with its load of British guineas for his majesty's troops.

Both have government permits, and neither can intrude on the other's grounds. The find was made by the expedition headed by R. T. Powell. The other expedition is financed by the Empire Marine Salvage and Engineering Corporation.

Two previous attempts have been made to salvage the Hussar, one in 1794, the other in 1856. Both ended in failure.

Power Company Sale To TVA Is Up Today

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 5 (AP).—Arguments attacking the legality of the proposed acquisition by the Tennessee Valley Authority of electric utility properties of the Tennessee Public Service Co. are scheduled for hearing before the State Railroad and Public Utilities Commission tomorrow.

The company has petitioned the commission to approve the sale of its holdings in and near Knoxville to the TVA for $6,191,136. Mrs. W. G. Ruble, of Morristown, Tenn., a preferred stockholder, and a group of 13 Tennessee ice and coal companies, have filed intervening petitions.

Falls Church Youth Hurt in Crash Here

Elliott Buckley, 17, of Falls Church, Va., suffered a possible skull fracture late yesterday when his automobile collided with a truck at Fourteenth and P streets northwest. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said his condition was serious.

Police took Samuel Voliva, 27, of Baltimore, driver of the truck, into custody for investigation.

Court to Get Data on Sugar From Wallace

Quota Findings Based on Tariff Body Reports, Says Secretary.

Data on which the Department of Agriculture based its quota findings for the Jones-Costigan sugar act were obtained from the tariff commission, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace testified in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

After constant attempts of Hawaiian sugar interests to obtain the information upon which the quotas were allotted, Secretary Wallace agreed to produce the data, excluding only diplomatic passages that touched upon "international relationships." Wallace injected the international angle into the case several days ago when he objected to introduction of the report of the interdepartmental committee upon which the sugar board made its rulings.

Justice Jennings Bailey ruled, after questioning Wallace, that the Cabinet officer should not "in the public interest" disclose the confidential papers which formed a part of the board's reasons for cutting the Hawaiian allotment down to 916,000 tons of sugar a year.

Can Ship Sugar in Free.

Hawaii, it was shown, can ship its sugar into the United States duty free and compete with American producers because of the high quality of its product. Cuba, testimony developed, as a foreign nation did not have the same protection and was being treated with some consideration because of its vast farm purchases from this country.

Wallace was on the stand only a few minutes. He was excused when he promised to make available the Tariff Commission's data. This data, attorneys said, in turn was obtained by the commission from a sugar trade journal and was known to the Hawaiians.

A proclamation by President Roosevelt changing the method of disbursement of money obtained from processing taxes on sugar beets, sugar cane and sugar produced in Hawaii was made public shortly after his proclamation of June 30 was placed in the record by the petitioners.

Government counsel then informed the producers the President had issued an order changing the distribution of the processing tax so that the money now reverts to the general fund of the Treasury. Previously it was used in "furthering" agricultural development in the islands.

Dr. Ezekiel on Stand.

Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, spent several hours on the stand identifying a trunk full of charts, graphs and tables used by the sugar board.

Justice Bailey asked attorneys when they expected to finish their case, and Walter L. Rice, chief Government representative, said he hoped to conclude by Monday afternoon.

Dr. Ezekiel said that if the Jones-Costigan act, which he admitted was an emergency measure, had not been adopted the price of sugar would have been depressed to such an extent that the Hawaiian producers would have lost huge sums in excess of the estimated $9,000,000 they will lose under the quota regulations.

Fate of Edwards Is Given to Jury

a bewildered youth of "amateurish mentality" who "did not use discretion or judgment in his affairs of the heart," but argued that he only was "guilty of indiscretion with this girl," adding, "Edwards is 21; she was 27."

Daniel Edwards, the defendant's father, took the stand to say, "I shall stand by him," and termed the youth's love notes to Miss Crain "letters written by a boy in puppy love."

Mrs. Edwards, the youth's mother, testified briefly in a trembling voice of her son's return home the night of Freda's death. It was her first appearance in the courtroom.

The defense then called a group of character witnesses who testified to the defendant's reputation as "a peaceable young man of good conduct."

Freshman Calls Filibuster a 'Noisy Congressman.'

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 5 (AP).—A "filibuster is a noisy Congressman," wrote one Southwestern College freshman.

Prof. W. R. Atkinson said today he was tempted to give the student 100 per cent on the test.

Other questions in "current topics" examinations for freshmen and sophomores yielded this information:

"Bill Terry is the iron man of bicycle races."

"Hitler is Viceroy of India."

"Huey Long is the father of the lame duck amendment."

"The Brain Trust is composed largely of physicians and surgeons."

'Brandeis Incident' Under Microscope

Gen. Johnson would be the first to admit that he committed a gross impropriety when he gave the impression in his recent New York speech that NRA had been developed under the guidance and counsel of Mr. Justice Brandeis. The general would make reparation, if reparation were possible. It is not.

The incident might be considered closed but for the persistence of talk originating, it would appear, in places where there is a mistaken notion that the justice might be dissuaded from sitting in cases involving the NRA. If the champions of NRA hoped to get rid of Mr. Justice Brandeis, the magnifying of the episode would be more understandable. For whoever will trouble to consult the jurist's writings will soon discover that he could never have had a hand in developing the NRA as it evolved under Gen. Johnson. It violated the first principles in which the justice believes.

However, it seems to be the enemies of NRA who are raising the question of whether Mr. Justice Brandeis will withdraw. They are wasting breath. He will not withdraw, not only because there is no reason why he should withdraw, but also because to do so would establish an absurd and unsound precedent. Then reckless or indiscreet men could readily embarrass and induce the withdrawal of judges in an effort to tamper with justice.

However, the whole incident has suffered from distortion. The intimation that Mr. Justice Brandeis should withdraw will not stand examination. It presupposes that he did in fact act as a legal guide and counselor in the creation or evolution of NRA, and that he also is committed in advance to an opinion that the NRA is Constitutional. Aside from his recorded convictions about the workability—not Constitutionality—of the theories embedded in the original and Johnsonian NRA, neither he nor any of his colleagues would ever make any such commitment. No Government official, or lawyer, in his right mind, would dare seek such a commitment. Gen. Johnson never sought such a thing. In fairness to the general, it ought to be remembered that he did not say that. He said he had consulted with Mr. Justice Brandeis. To say that was a violation of confidence—and inexcusable, therefore. But it is only by twisting it, distorting it, that the notion can be advanced that Mr. Justice Brandeis is compromised, that he should withdraw.

If Mr. Justice Brandeis were to take notice of the incident, to say anything about it, would obviously be to say that he had not done something incompatible with his honor and duty as a judge. And that, after all, is about what those who raise the question of the propriety of his sitting are charging. They are, unwittingly, perhaps, making a grave accusation. It is not hard to guess that Mr. Justice Brandeis' associates on the bench are quite as indignant about that as he might well be.

But beyond that, the episode serves to bring into focus once again the curiously persistent idea that judges are men of weak character—that they must not associate with their fellow men, that they must not discuss public issues and problems with the laity lest, perchance, their own minds be improperly influenced so that they can no longer render fair and honest opinions as judges. All too often judges go into a kind of social exile for fear of being suspected of inability to maintain their own impartiality and integrity otherwise.

There is, manifestly, good reason for circumspection. The legal profession is not altogether free of men who would try to capitalize on close association with members of the bench.

But is there any reason that will bear analysis why judges should not discuss public affairs and National problems with Government officials or others whose discretion is assumed—even if sometimes mistakenly assumed? Is there any reason why Gen. Johnson should not have talked with Mr. Justice Brandeis or any other member of the bench? The trouble was not that the general talked with the justice—assuming that he did—but that he attempted in a public speech to use the justice as a sort of certificate of character—if not legality—for NRA. It was an unpardonable breach. But those who harp on it as if it were more than that do an even greater injustice, not only to Mr. Justice Brandeis but, incidentally, to the repentant general.

Hauptmann Sane, Say Alienists; Defense Alibi Shaken by Letters relatives about any business transaction with Hauptmann," Foley said.

"Subsequent letters indicate that Hauptmann had failed to answer questions contained in original letters.

"There also has been found among Hauptmann's effects an unfinished letter to Pincus Fisch in which he sets forth that he and Fisch started business on November 1, 1933, with a capital of $35,000 and that they had on hand some $22,000 worth of furs, the whereabouts of which were unknown to him (Hauptmann).

Tells of Stock Losses.

"This letter also sets forth that he lost heavily in the market in 1933 and that he met Fisch in 1932.

"This latter admission of his is important in view of the report now of his contention that he knew Fisch since 1931, the year before the kidnaping."

Permission for Aaron R. Lewis, defense handwriting expert, to compare Hauptmann's handwriting with that on the ransom notes will be sought from the New Jersey attorney general, defense attorneys announced. Foley indicated he would not contest the request.

The order for the grand jury minutes was signed by County Judge Harry Stackel, who is expected to preside over Hauptmann's extortion trial in the Bronx on October 11.

At Flemington, N. J., county seat of Hunterdon County, where the Lindbergh home was located, it was announced the grand jury will be convened on Monday to consider indicting Hauptmann on murder and kidnaping charges.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey said Lindbergh would not be called before the Hunterdon jury.

After asserting that he would not surrender Hauptmann before the scheduled date of the extortion trial, October 11, unless New Jersey requests, District Attorney Foley said a postponement on the extortion charge would be asked by the prosecution if New Jersey desired time to complete its case.

Two Banks to Pay Patrons $585,000 part, by litigation instituted by certain stockholders against an assessment levy. Fifty per cent of the deposits of both Potomac Savings and District National Banks were released on their entry into the Hamilton Bank plan.

Commenting on the impending Northeast and Seventh Street Savings Bank payments and the recent disbursement of Washington Savings Bank, Mr. Hamilton reminded that their depositors will receive, or will have received $659,095 in second payments. This will bring the total to $1,907,457, out of $2,496,720.

These dividends will mean for Seventh Street Savings Bank depositors $80 for every $100 on deposit at the time of closing; for Northeast Savings depositors, $75 for every $100, and for Washington Savings depositors, $70 for every $100.

Slow Assets Cited.

Mr. Hamilton explained that the large payments to depositors in these banks have been arranged despite the fact that only slow assets were left when they closed their doors. This was due to the fact, he added, "that, prior to the closings, these banks had been faced with destructive 'runs,' which not only used up all cash but required the sale of bonds and other liquid assets."

Mr. Hamilton said that closed banks in the District of Columbia are being administered effectively in the interests of depositors under the direction of Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor.

Arizona Seeks Peace In War on Farm Aliens

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 5 (AP).—Gov. B. B. Moeur moved today toward peaceful settlement of the Salt River Valley antialien dispute, announcing a committee would gather facts on the controversy.

The chief executive's move followed closely reported bombings of irrigation ditches near Japanese and Hindu farms, and word from Washington that Japanese Charge d'Affaires Fujii had called upon the Secretary of State for information regarding the violence.

Mouse Is Lassoed, Hung High in Air By Web of Spider

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 5 (AP).—A big spider in the barnyard of C. T. Whittle turned cowboy with surprising results.

It lassoed a live mouse with a strand of its web and suspended the mouse, struggling, 15 feet in the air.

Whittle walked out of the barn today and was astounded to see the mouse hanging in midair without visible means of support. Close inspection disclosed the spider's web.

A gust of wind broke the thread as a photographer was slipping up to make a picture of the trapped victim. The mouse scampered away.

Scope of Power Of Stock Board Facing Decision

Right to Enforce Law May Be Fixed as Result of Clash.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As a result of a clash of views which developed in the hearing over the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation bonds, the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday was confronted with making a decision which may go far to indicate the future course of that agency.

The BMT bond case, the first important controversial matter to come before the commission, is of prime importance because its determination may either be used as the foundation for a court test of the commission's powers or as showing necessity for strengthening amendments to the 1933 securities act.

The immediate decision before the commission, however, relates to procedure rather than to the merits of that case. This question was precipitated when Ferdinand Pecora, one commissioner, publicly insisted at the hearing that representatives of the banking houses underwriting the bond issue be called before the commission. John J. Burns, chief counsel of the commission, opposed this suggestion, contending he had already proved his case and there was no use in continuing the matter further.

The securities in question, $8,000,000 of B.-M. T. bonds, were issued in June. The B.-M. T. did not register them under the securities act on the ground that the offering was being made privately to bankers and without the use of the mails or otherwise entering interstate commerce.

In August the bonds were admitted to a listing on the "big board" in New York and were actively traded. The new Securities Commission last month refused to give the bonds a temporary registration under this year's stock market control act, which meant that they were removed from the New York Exchange's lists last Saturday.

Purpose of Hearings.

The hearings were held to decide whether temporary registration should not be permanently refused on the ground that the issuers of the bonds had evaded the 1933 securities act. Testimony was brought out to show that the bankers, to whom the bonds were given in payment of indebtedness, sold a large part of them and that at least $1,890,000 of the bonds were sold to buyers residing outside of New York, thus getting into the channels of interstate trade.

Mr. Burns contended this proved his point that the bonds should be denied registration. Mr. Pecora, however, believes the underwriting bankers—Lehman Brothers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; J. & W. Seligman and Hayden Stone Co. should be called before the commission to tell what transpired prior to the issue in order that it might be determined whether there was an effort to discover a loophole in last year's securities act. Mr. Burns, in effect, took the position that the motives of the managers of the issue was beside the point.

Healy Comments.

Robert Healy, who presided, explained that the question of calling the bankers before the commission would be decided in executive session. He adjourned the hearing, subject to a call to reopen it to hear the bankers if that course is decided on.

'Seizure' of Land For Park Attacked because of the numerous chemicals found in it.

Injunction Sought.

Under the law, the petitioners said, the Virginia authorities should first have made an effort to purchase their property before proceeding with a condemnation hearing, at which the owners were not present.

Attorneys William E. Leahy, Samuel A. Syme and Lawrence H. Gourley, who represented the petitioners, said in their complaint that the title of the owners would be "clouded" by the transfer of title from the State of Virginia to the Federal Government, and might prevent them from seeking recourse for the taking of their land in the State courts.

They asked that the court issue an order prohibiting Secretary Ickes from accepting the title. The Government has 20 days within which to file an answer. It is not believed that title to other tracts, included in the park area, will be affected by the suit. The park has been improved, roads built, and underbrush cleared away. It ranks with the scenic wonders of the East in its rugged scenery.

Arlington Road Link Rushed; Bids Due Soon

Right-of-Way Disputes Are Near Settlement, State Official Reports.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

While additional and unexpected surveys have had to be made during the last two weeks in order to avoid condemnation of property upon which a costly house is located, the Virginia State highway commission expects to be able to call for bids within 30 days for construction of a connection between the Lee boulevard and the Arlington Memorial Bridge from Lyon Park.

Information received from H. G. Shirley, chairman of the commission, was to the effect that only two property adjustments are yet to be made, and that right-of-way engineers have progressed so far on these that settlement seems assured.

In attempting the location of the road in accordance with plans submitted by the Bureau of Public Roads, Shirley said it would have been necessary to acquire and destroy an expensive residence. Since the State's funds for right-of-way purposes are limited, he ordered that a new survey be made and that portion of the road has been relocated, with the result that the road has been straightened rather than made more difficult.

This and other slight changes made in the route by State engineers have been submitted to the bureau of public roads for approval, Shirley said, since Federal funds are to be used in the construction of the road.

Shirley stated the commission can proceed with the work pending settlement of the condemnation suits in court.

The State is ready to proceed with the work as soon as the right of way has been finally approved, he declared.

Services tomorrow morning at the Community Methodist Church, of Aurora Heights, will be conducted by Emory S. Bucke, of the American University. His subject The Junior Community Center, will be "The Man Who Had Pity." of Lyon Park, will meet today at 3 p. m.

Ousting of Unions Is Ruled Illegal

Cummings and the Department of Justice be stricken from convention record.

Attack Made by Padway.

The attack was made by Joseph Padway, counsel for the Wisconsin Federation of Labor. He said the Justice Department had given labor "the shabbiest, vilest kind of treatment," and criticized Cummings for alleged failure to institute criminal proceedings for asserted violations of the National Recovery Act.

"The Attorney General and the Department of Justice," said Tobin, "are just as anxious to get an opinion in the Supreme Court as any man here. The department is not yet quite sure if the law will be sustained in court."

Tobin at first declined to withdraw his motion at the request of President William Green, who said Padway was an invited guest and was entitled to the convention floor as an open forum.

Later Tobin complied with Green's request, saying he had accomplished his purpose in bringing the matter to the floor.

Perkins Sees Peace Pact.

Secretary Perkins foresaw the gradual adoption of agreements between capital and labor "with or without the assistance of mediation and arbitration" as a substitute for strikes.

Repeatedly applauded as she spoke, the Secretary also announced that plans for social insurance to be presented before the next Congress will "embrace some form of unemployment insurance and of old-age pensions."

"A social security program," she said, "has been recommended by the President and is now being worked upon by a large committee.

"It includes unemployment insurance to stabilize income during periods of unemployment and the development of a continuous work program based on social needs.

"Minimum wage laws, child labor laws and laws for shortening the hours of labor for women will be introduced in 20 States this year and should have the support of local labor."

Miss Perkins made it clear that she was speaking for the Administration.

"This speech of mine," she said, "although I have taken some liberties with it, was corrected in Washington, so you may know the meaning of any inference or statement made here."

Urges System Be Tried.

The Labor Secretary did not refer specifically to President Roosevelt's recent proposal for a "trial period" of industrial peace through commitments to be made by both sides, but indicated she was working in that direction when she said:

"The Government has established boards to make judicial findings of act and to arbitrate if both parties to a dispute agree, and to maintain machinery for effective industrial relations in cases where the principal parties can not quickly and peacefully agree.

"It seems fitting, proper and reasonable that this system should be given a fair trial."

Emphasizing that "neither capital nor labor can or should be coerced," Miss Perkins said that to make the peace agreements truly effective "both employers and workers must turn to these methods willingly."

Announced plans to have the federation convention picketed by colored people in their campaign for "economic equality" failed to materialize up to the time Miss Perkins spoke. The convention, however, adopted resolutions designed to assist colored workers.

Residents Ask Board to Open 1-Room School

51 Fairfax Families Sign Petition Seeking Added Facilities.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245. Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The school board of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday received a petition of 51 families of the Sydenstricker neighborhood asking that the local one-room school be reopened. The school, closed last summer, was the last one-room school in the county where all seven elementary grades were taught.

The citizens ask the board to continue the first three grades at least and transport the larger children to the Burke School rather than keep the entire school closed. The board appointed Supt. W. T. Woodson and Mrs. L. I. Dolph, trustee from Lee district, as a committee to investigate the situation. It was suggested that the matter might be settled by rerouting several of the school buses in that vicinity, providing more transportation, rather than reopen the school.

The bus route from Belle Aire was ordered extended as far as possible on the Franconia road to take care of the children near Sydenstricker. The bus route from Gunston Neck to Lorton was extended to the gate of the Hallowing Point Club. This bus will take elementary children to the Lorton School and continue to the Lee-Jackson School with high school pupils.

The board yesterday approved adoption of a new curriculum for the larger high schools in the county. This provides for four divisions of training, the academic, vocational, commercial and the elective. The proposed system will now be forwarded to the State board of education in Richmond for final approval.

Mrs. Elsie A. Davis, rural supervisor of elementary schools, was authorized to purchase $25 worth of new books to add to the traveling school library which periodically visits the more remote schools. A check of $500 was ordered sent to the State health department to aid in defraying the expenses of the dental clinic being conducted in the white and colored schools of the county.

Franklin Gooding has been elected president of the senior class of Oakton High School; Lehman Young, vice president; Marie Randolph, secretary and treasurer; Dorothy Bingham, reporter, and Harris Nipe, faculty member.

Chauncey Butler has been made president of the juniors; Mary Burke, vice president; Mary Hughes, secretary-treasurer, and Hazel Sheetz, reporter.

Federal Help Awaits Parks In Maryland

Camp Sites and Wild Life Refuges Included in Program.

The Federal Government is ready to cooperate with Maryland authorities in the development of roadside camp sites, pleasure grounds near large cities and wild-life refuges, it was pointed out yesterday by Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service.

Dr. Symons, speaking over Station WBAL, said the Government, in carrying out its land-utilization program, was ready to present definite proposals to the residents of Garrett County.

He pointed out that the Public Works Administration has set aside $25,000,000 for the utilization program in Maryland and other States. He also stated that the Government program was three-fold.

This includes the purchase of land, the assisting of people located on submarginal lands to improve their living conditions through relocation on good lands nearby, and the development of land for better uses.

He emphasized that whatever is done in Maryland in connection with the land utilization proposals will only be done as a result of the whole-hearted cooperation and interest of communities involved.

Visits in Maryland Will Be Made Today.

A tour of interesting old homes in the Poolesville area will be sponsored today by the Guild of St. Peter's Church of Poolesville, Md. The tour will begin at 10 a. m. and continue through the afternoon.

The first place to be visited is the 200-year-old Windolph residence at Dawsonville. Among the other places is Waldene, one of the old Dade homesteads, now owned by Col. W. G. Wall, a descendant; Rock Hall, the home of McGill Belt, built in 1812 by Roger Johnson, who nominated George Washington for the Presidency, and who was brother of Thomas Johnson, first Governor of Maryland.

At the end of the tour, tea will be served at the home of Mrs. George Willard in Poolesville. The general committee includes: Mrs. Bettie Edmonston, chairman; Mrs. Guy Crook, Mrs. Marian Shears, Mrs. William A. Daniel and Mrs. Benjamin White.

Wisconsin's Governor To Lose Part of Foot

Madison, Wis., Oct. 5 (AP).—Gov. A. G. Schmedeman will undergo an operation for the amputation of part of his left foot in the next 24 hours, it was announced at his office today.

Gov. Schmedeman suffered an injury to his ankle while attending the dedication of Rib Mountain State Park at Wausau, on September 13.

Sunrise in the Suburbs

By Clyde H. DuBose.

George Brinkerhoff, owner of the College Park Airport, has announced that as a feature of his air show today and tomorrow, a man will make a 2,000-foot jump without a parachute.

This unusual person hails from New Orleans and is known to the air-minded world as "Windy Hy Drogen." He will demonstrate his gas-inflated jumping suit.

Brinkerhoff himself will demonstrate his new invention for bombing a city from an airplane "with perfect aim." To show how it works, he expects to blow up one of his neighbors' sheds near the airport.

The kiddies out in Riverdale will have to pay 2 cents more for their school lunches this year. The Parent-Teacher Association raised the price to 5 cents per lunch, but promised a little variety from the soup and sandwich.

Another demonstration of the activity of the very live organization known as the 4-H Club will take place in Fairfax County today. The annual county's "achievement day" will be held at the Annandale School.

Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, dropped in over at Arlington County the other night long enough to tell the local Democrats they could consider him a re-elected man. Mr. Smith will oppose John Locke Green, an Arlington County Republican, in the November elections.

Arlington Countians will make a last rush for the polls today to register for the November elections. No one is expected to be killed in the rush, however, as most everyone has registered.

Capital District Kiwanis Meets Next Thursday

Included on the program are Edwin F. Hill, of Washington; Irving Diener, of Alexandria; Merle E. Towner, C. Walter Cole, of Towson, Md.; Dr. Henry A. Converse, of Harrisonburg, Va., and President William J. Carrington, of Kiwanis International, who comes from Atlantic City.

Ladies of the Kiwanis Club will have separate sessions throughout the convention. Capital District officers are Elmer I. Carruthers, of Charlottesville, Va., district governor; Mr. Hill, immediate past district governor; Asa F. Howard, of Roanoke, Va., secretary-treasurer; Mr. Diener, W. Richard Broaddus, jr., the Rev. Harry H. Hemming, Big Stone Gap, Va.; Richard W. Copeland, of Hopewell, Va.; Dr. Guy R. Fisher, of Staunton, Va., and M. Channing Wagner, of Wilmington, Del., all lieutenant governors.

The straight whiskey used in CALVERT was aged in charred oak casks for 5 years before being blended with neutral grain spirits. Then the blend was returned to the original casks to unite or "marry." The delicate aroma and full, rich flavor so distinctive of CALVERT result from this "Perfect Marriage."

When sound and right, this fragrant whiskey is sealed in its distinctive decanter bottle under the proud name of CALVERT—a name that for generations has stood for the finest whiskey ever made in the State of Maryland.

Democracy At Stake.

Simultaneously with the outbreak of attempted revolution in Spain, Premier Doumergue of France addressed to his fellow citizens by radio the most dramatic appeal which the head of any French government has made in recent years. "We must choose," he told his far-flung audience, "between internal peace and civil war."

France and Spain are both engaged in an epic struggle to maintain that democratic form of government which has been submerged by dictatorships throughout most of Europe. With France it is an endeavor to sustain traditions first established a century and a half ago. With Spain it is an attempt to make a success of the revolution of 1931. There are many differences in the nature and seriousness of the problems facing the two countries. But in both cases the future of democracy is at stake.

And in both cases the shortcomings of democracy have led to the crisis which is acute in Spain, latent in France. Apathetic, disorganized and unrepresentative parliaments; bloc systems which encourage ceaseless compromise and unsavory alignments; scandal in high places, such as the Stavisky case in France, and popular insistence upon immediate reforms which are in practice unattainable without long preparation—all these are elements in the problems confronting the governments of both Madrid and Paris.

France, with her longer traditions of political stability and her much higher standards of popular education, is of the two in far less serious case. That fact, however, emphasizes the importance of the specific items which Premier Doumergue singles out as essential to the preservation of domestic peace. For in France the situation can still be met by the forces of reason, while in Spain rifles are deciding.

The absolute independence of the judiciary; the effective prohibition of all political activity by government employes; resolute economies to secure budgetary balance; refusal to manipulate the currency, and under those conditions wider powers for the chief executive—those are the essentials necessary to avert a slide to dictatorship in France as laid down by her Premier.

It is not only in France that the public reaction to these issues will determine the fate of democracy.

Balanced Budget.

Early last spring word came out of the West that devastating hordes of grasshoppers and chinch bugs might be expected to ravage crops. But the most severe drought of record parched the insects as well as their food. Now Prof. Roger G. Smith, Department of Entomology, Kansas State College, declares that the country will be free from these pests for some time to come.

Nature always tries to balance the budget and often stimulates man to assist her in so doing. The Johnstown flood, which cost 2,000 lives, attracted attention to local industrial possibilities theretofore unimagined. Terrific toll was taken by the Galveston hurricane, but man, forced by Nature to act on the defensive, built a barricade against the ocean which is now one of the world's wonders. San Francisco, rocked by earthquake and melted by fire, rose from crumbled ground and ashes to majestic proportions.

A Local Responsibility.

Since the future of the Nation is largely determined by the character of the training given to its youth, there is a National basis for the belief that the Federal Government ought to subsidize education in communities where schools have been closed for lack of funds. Undoubtedly the lowering of educational standards through the closing of schools, the shortening of school terms, and underpayment or nonpayment of teachers, has been a major disaster of the depression. Nobody questions the seriousness of the emergency created by such conditions. But in our eagerness to correct them we may easily commit mistakes of policy that in the long run will weaken our educational system instead of strengthening it.

Under our form of government, education is primarily the concern of the States, and of the local governments subordinate to them. Financial provision for the schools is a direct, recurrent obligation which can not be shifted to Washington without grave danger of impairing the sense of local responsibility.

Indeed, arguments against Federal grants-in-aid for education are even more compelling than those advanced against Federal unemployment relief. They are not, like the latter, of an extraordinary or emergency character. Moreover, with relief outlays already covered so largely by Federal appropriations—in some cases with virtually no local provision for the needy—there is still less excuse for appealing to the Federal Government to finance ordinary expenditures.

Although insistence upon the principle of self-help may seem harsh, the schools will themselves benefit from a policy which compels local governments to make suitable provision for education out of their own resources. State and local tax reforms, elimination of nonessential expenditures and avoidance of waste in administration would today enable many communities that consider themselves helpless victims of depression to make completely adequate provision for educational needs. These necessary reforms will only be retarded if the Federal Government undertakes to provide funds that should be locally raised.

Communities which realize the value of education always have and always will find a way to provide schooling. Communities which show that they regard education as a luxury, easily dispensed with, are not entitled to expect subsidies from the National Treasury at the expense of those who are manfully carrying their own burden.

A Calm Appraisal.

In his address before the National Press Club, Donald R. Richberg made it clear that there are to be radical modifications of the price-fixing and production-control policies that have been the subject of violent controversy ever since the inception of the NRA. It would be a mistake, however, to jump hastily to the conclusion that the new policy director of NRA favors a sudden and complete overthrow of all code restrictions upon the prices and output of organized industries.

Although Mr. Richberg has been popularly identified with the group that wishes to restore freedom of competition by resurrecting our anti-trust laws, a careful reading of his speech shows that his conception of free competition is far removed from that of the economists of the laissez faire era.

To Mr. Richberg, free competition is synonymous with fair competition, which he proposes to assure through industrial cooperation. His views on this subject were stated most lucidly some time ago when he attempted to defend certain provisions of the steel code against the attacks of the Darrow board. He then said that an entirely new interpretation of the anti-trust laws had become imperative and that it must be made in the light of existing conditions and not on the basis of abstract theory.

Starting from this realistic premise, Mr. Richberg pointed out that concerted action was needed to prevent unfairly low prices from being quoted and to curb competitive practices that tend to destroy industrial stability. He restated his position on Thursday when he explained that: "There is no doubt of the necessity in some specific instances of preventing destructive price-cutting. There is no doubt of the necessity sometimes of putting some control on production." No man who holds such opinions would wish to restore the anti-trust laws in full force and vigor.

Mr. Richberg's strictures are directed primarily against those who seek to put industry into a strait-jacket by control methods that are virtually impossible of enforcement and would not be in the public interest even if they could be enforced. He does not propose to apply hard-and-fast formulae to test the soundness and workability of code provisions, nor does he expect to introduce sudden and sweeping changes.

This cool eclecticism is in marked contrast with the impulsive methods that characterized the reign of Gen. Johnson. It is the best sort of guaranty that business will not be harassed by a multitude of decrees, often of an irreconcilable nature. The emphasis placed upon the study of individual industries and rejection of abstract theories of control that take no account of the problems peculiar to each industry are likewise a hopeful indication. It appears that the revised NRA, if less ambitious in its aims than the original organization, will at least build more surely upon a more solid foundation.

The Housing Project.

No step in the movement to rid Washington of its alley slums is more important than the selection of executives to direct the program. Under skillful administration the authority contemplated by the Capper-Norton Act may inaugurate a project that will revolutionize low-cost housing in the District. Haphazard and inexperienced administration can just as readily put this undertaking in the class of bungled experiments.

President Roosevelt has evidently been impressed with the necessity of choosing the best available talent, as shown by his appointment of an advisory committee to make recommendations. With the aid of this group, it is understood that he will name as the District Alley Clearance Authority: Commissioner Hazen, Arno B. Crammerer, director of the National Park Service, and Col. Horatio B. Hackett, director of the PWA Housing Division. There is some disappointment among leading citizens because of the apparent failure to choose at least one of the Washingtonians who have given years of voluntary service to this cause. But it appears that the act bars non-official membership. And there is no doubt that the group named would admirably coordinate the various low-cost housing projects about to be launched here.

Local citizens are largely responsible for the current housing program. For years they have been at work—investigating the social menace of wretched alley dwellings hidden from the public view and indefatigably working to interest Congress in a clearance program. A committee organized through the leadership of Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, Frederic A. Delano, John Ihlder, and others played a leading role in the preparation of plans which, it is hoped, are now about to be executed. The advice and experience of such close students of Washington's low-cost housing problem would be an invaluable asset to the board.

Since this local movement got under way, however, the PWA has come into the picture. Coordination of its activities with the slum clearance project authorized by the Capper-Norton Act is of the utmost importance. And complete harmony might be difficult to secure without representation of both groups on the alley clearance authority.

Nevertheless, the importance of keeping the entire project on a local basis can scarcely be overemphasized. Elimination of disease-infested slums is essentially a municipal task. Ultimately the community of Washington will have to pay for these improvements, and citizens here will obtain the benefits. The problems involved are best known to the District's housing experts, who for years have been preparing the way for the job that is now about to be done. Choice of a local expert to direct the actual work should automatically follow selection of the slum-clearance authority.

On Kidding One's Self.

"The biggest job in education today is to teach young people, if you will permit a lapse into the vernacular, to stop kidding themselves."

At his induction yesterday as president of Williams College, Dr. Tyler Dennett made this the gist of a fine and sane address. "What we have in mind," he said, "is to make a young man into a sufficiently intelligent citizen so that he can, for example, read the morning paper and know why the world will not disarm."

That is approaching the function of education realistically. It is the approach that would be expected from Dr. Dennett's background as scholar, historian and diplomat. He spoke at length about the need for objective, impersonal controversy whereby, in that "community of letters" which is the ideal college, the truth is likely to emerge. He decried the voluntary surrender of liberty by the people, and the many invasions "of long-loved private right" on the part of government. He said that he hoped his college would always stand as a bulwark against invasions of the right of free speech and free thought. And then Dr. Dennett pointed out that an uneducated people is more apt to allow such surrenders than those who have learned "to stop kidding themselves."

With good taste Dr. Dennett refrained from entering into a debate on whether the American home has broken down, whether the church has lost its way, or whether "preparatory schools have become commercialized and school teaching converted into a trade." But he did "venture to observe" that each year more and more young people enter college "lacking the most essential quality in character."

"I do not mean that they lie and steal," he said. "I mean that they are not honest with themselves. A deplorably large number are victims of disordered homes, of wrong ways of living, of wrong thinking which they have learned from their elders who themselves have gone wrong."

It is a difficult task which faces any educator today. How is he to teach these youngsters the imperishable value of intellectual integrity? Dr. Dennett has no panacea, but in one short phrase he expresses wherein he believes the hope of youth lies. "Thank God, the young folks are generally eager to learn—if only their elders will give them that liberty."

And that is why he has pledged himself and his excellent small college in the shadow of the Berkshire Hills to provoke and promote differences of opinion and ward off that "sad day" when all may come to think alike.

The Decline Of Toasts.

Among the disappointments of repeal is the failure of toasts to regain the popularity in which they once were held. In years gone by, this utterly masculine practice was the chief attraction of banquets and testimonial dinners.

The offering of toasts gave an opportunity to inject into otherwise prosaic lives a bit of poetry or a dash of verve. Many gentlemen achieved undreamed of heights after first having drunk a dedicatory round or so. Indeed, as the banquet progressed, it was possible to chart the rise and gradual flattening out of well-turned phrases and extemporaneous purple passages.

Our dull age can only imagine the thrill which went 'round the company when Andrew Jackson arose and offered his immortal, "The Federal Union! It must be preserved." Or the roseate feeling which once inspired a noted misanthrope to propose:

> Health to the sick
> Wealth to the brave
> A husband to the widow
> Freedom to the slave.

Like the composing of epitaphs, the offering of toasts is out of joint with our times. Vast collections of them lie embalmed and brittle in the limbo of discarded customs—a mere challenge to the curious to explain the spirit which once made them popular.

There are so many kinds of postage stamps now current that a man who pasted a chewing gum wrapper on an outgoing letter several days ago received today from the addressee a reply beginning, "Answering your special delivery letter forwarded by air mail * * *"

The average motorist's idea of a good time would be to buy a battleship, mount it on wheels, get on the highway and crowd 500 road hogs into the ditch.

Woman arrested for talking too much is dismissed by court.—News item. Probably with the injunction, "Go and chin no more."

The Director of the Budget.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I address a few remarks to your editorial of October 4, in which you lament the apparent relegation by the Administration of the office of the Director of the Budget to the status of a routine position? You would have in this office one who holds independent financial views, who would originate budgetary policies and who would have the ability and courage publicly to maintain his position. In Mr. Douglas you feel that these qualities were realized.

It seems to me that upon any sound Constitutional or National budgetary theory you are absolutely wrong. Apart from and above any legislation, the President of the United States is its Chief Executive, and upon him alone rests the responsibility for the budgetary policies which are to be recommended to the Congress. This was recognized by the budget and accounting act, which specifically sets up a National budget system with the President alone at its head. Under the law it is the President (who submits the budget to Congress. It is his budget and his financial program. Our whole budgetary theory rests upon this principle.

The Director of the Budget is simply an agent of the President. He has no authority whatsoever under the law. Broadly speaking, it is a routine position. It is, nevertheless, a position of high technical importance, requiring skill and knowledge of routine of Governmental operations of an unusual order. It is, therefore, one of the most difficult positions in the Government service.

In the nature of the case, therefore, the Director of the Budget can only speak with the voice of the President. He can not concern himself with questions of high financial policy. His position is in no way comparable in importance to that of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The development of budgetary procedure in the United States would have proceeded upon surer ground had not the office of Director of the Budget been upon occasion lifted out of its natural place through dramatization of the person who held it.

Unheeded Advice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to call your attention to a discrepancy between the article from Mr. Lothrop Stoddard printed in The Post of October 1, entitled "Grave Crisis Confronts Colombian President," and my letter to you of June 25, published in your issue of June 27.

Mr. Stoddard says that Colombian domestic difficulities were aggravated by a diplomatic crisis which threatened foreign war over the Leticia boundary dispute with Peru. If they had fulfilled my stipulations, agreed by them, when I extricated them from the debris into which they were plunged after the Senate so strenuously rejected the ratification of her treaty with the United States—viz., to submit the Leticia case to arbitration in 1921—they would not have made preparations for war against Peru, whose President assisted me to help them in her hour of need, all of which I explained in my said letter to you of June 25. TERESE PREVOST.
Washington, Oct. 1.

Colonel to You, Sir!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The extravagant Kentucky custom of conferring military titles upon persons not connected with the military service is unfair to those who honestly earn their titles in the regular way. There is so much extravagance and bad taste abroad that any official sanction of it is unfortunate. Calling a person a colonel does not make him one; it only tends to cheapen what otherwise is a title of honor and dignity.

Gov. Ruby Laffoon's haste to create empty honors is making him a promoter of the burlesque. He could, with the same quality of grace, confer academic or medical titles. If the Governor insists on handing out unearned honors it would be better for him to imagine some title of his own and not appropriate one that belongs exclusively to the Nation's soldiers.

Piscatory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to know what has become of the fish column of The Post. I am a steady reader of your paper and the news I always look for, and seldom find, is fish news. I do not care for ball news or horse news but am hungry for fishing news.

A fisherman doesn't want news about baseball, football, basket ball or other kinds of ball except fish balls. He wants to know where the fish may be caught and whether he can get a boat to get to the fish.

I would also like to know the name of the new fish being caught off Chesapeake Bay. They are exactly the shape of sheephead but have the mouth of a spot—very beautiful to look at and good to eat. They have silver scales with red stripes like a spot and a very small mouth with no teeth. This is the first season for them. One man caught a string of 18 in about an hour's time. R. F. GREEN.

"The Essence of Hoover's Warning."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In opening your columns to a discussion of Herbert Hoover's new book, "The Challenge to Liberty," you are performing a laudable public service. The space devoted to Mr. Wayne C. Williams' criticism fairly indicates your conception of the enormity of the issue now joined before the Nation — Democracy versus regimentation. Permit me to commend your intelligent patriotism in thus encouraging an exhaustive examination of this fundamental problem of our age. It is indeed an issue which touches directly the welfare of every citizen. And only by enlightened inquiry may we hope to arrive at sound policy.

Mr. Williams, it appears to me, neglects at the outset a pivotal point in Mr. Hoover's philosophy. "Liberty" is not used in the book as synonymous with laissez faire. Mr. Williams assumes that "liberty" and "freedom" imply the law of the jungle in economic and social relationships.

As if in anticipation of this evasive attack, Mr. Hoover has gone so far as to itemize (pp. 155-159) many of the principal measures enacted in denial of this concept. Some of them date from the first years of the Republic. Never, he concludes, has American policy been based upon the creed, "Every man for himself, and the devil take the hindmost." That long-forgotten slogan, the book reminds us (p. 53), "has been reborn in the past 12 months only as a dishonest polemic, as a straw man set up to be knocked down."

But having thus imputed to Mr. Hoover a philosophy which the text categorically denies and repudiates, Mr. Williams proceeds easily to all his subsidiary "false assumptions" in "The Challenge to Liberty." Quite logically, then, he arrives at the ultimate distortion of the New Deal retort—that every person who resists bureaucratic regimentation is a heartless advocate and defender of grinding child labor, starvation wages, cruel hours of labor and sweatshops.

The issue, however, is not between laissez faire and regulation; America decided that issue more than a century ago—in favor of regulation. The issue today is whether Government shall be by law or by Executive whim. "Regulation as to what men may not do must not be confused with regimentation of men into platoons under a Government corporal" (p. 161).

Again, "The individual must know precisely what his obligations and securities are, and must have the full protection of the courts in their inviolability" (p. 160).

If Mr. Williams will apply this simple formula to the air-mail cancellations, he will sense what appears to me to be the essence of Mr. Hoover's warning. Or he may apply the formula to the summary invalidation of gold contracts, to the New Jersey tailor who was jailed for violation of a pants-pressing code, to the Pennsylvania battery manufacturer who, without redress, was jailed for violations of a code which ordained his economic extinction.

No, the question is not whether our economic garden should be cleared of weeds. All sensible men acknowledge abuses, betrayals of trust, socially demoralizing greed. The issue—and this is the only issue presented in Mr. Hoover's book—is whether we shall approach these perennial problems by the processes of law or the processes of irresponsible dictatorship.

"Greed and dishonesty are not incidents solely of the American system. * * * We do not need to burn down the house to kill the rats." WALTER A. EMERSON.

As Others See It

A Model County.

Inspired by the new urge to innovation and experiment in public affairs, New York State soon will set up a laboratory in the form of a "model county." Tompkins County, with a population of 41,490, whose county seat is Ithaca, seat of Cornell University, will be the scene of the experiment. With an appropriation of $200,000 from the State temporary emergency relief administration, a development board has been formed, which will build rural roads, make land-use surveys, extend power lines, revise school districts and set up subsistence homesteads. Submarginal lands will be purchased, to be converted into reforestation projects and game refuges. The initial fund is only a small part of the money that will be supplied by State and county for the project.

It is a noteworthy event nowadays when a local governmental unit goes in for self-help.

The Post Impressionist

"The Happy Couple."

Postoffice, Saturday.

"I MAY be old-fashioned," our jeweler friend said to us in a somewhat abashed tone, "but I just can't get used to seeing girls come in and pick their own engagement rings. I liked the old custom better, when a woman took whatever ring her fiance bought for her." This in spite of the fact that Emily Post says "it is doubtful if he who carries a solitaire ring, in a little square box, and who produces it from his pocket on the instant she says 'Yes,' exists outside of moving pictures!"

We had between us on the counter a tray of engagement and wedding rings, each one of a different design. There were plain bands, fancy bands, gold bands, platinum bands. Some were mere circlets of diamonds, others bore the traditional orange blossoms, and still others were links within links. And scattered among these were a few, a very few, wedding bands for men.

We wanted to know if a salesman, attempting to sell an engagement ring when the young lady in question was present, had to be particularly tactful and delicate in mentioning the price.

"Sometimes the girl walks to the back of the store when we get to discussing prices," our informant replied; "but that's not a very good idea, because, if the ring she has selected turns out to be more expensive than the prospective bridegroom can afford, then it is very embarrassing to have to ask her to make another choice. Usually, however, the young couple have discussed this question before coming into our store, and she has a pretty good idea of the limits of his pocketbook."

In nearly all foreign countries the man buys his own wedding ring as a matter of course. Emily Post maintains that "if the bridegroom wishes to have a ring, the bride buys a plain gold band at the same time" that he purchases hers.

"Men as a rule don't like to wear them," one bright young salesman told us. "I think it's because, when a young woman comes in to buy one, she doesn't know any more about selecting the right ring than she does about selecting the right necktie. Usually she wants it the same design as her own wedding ring. That's all right as long as her band is plain, but you should see a man squirm when his girl tries to get him to have orange blossoms, like hers."

Diamonds are still the favored stone for engagement rings. Mrs. Post says this is because the diamond is supposed to be as "pure and flawless as the bride herself." But that's not the reason one jeweler gave us. He said they are chosen because they are considered the most precious stone. Another volunteered the opinion that it is because the diamond is the "showiest" stone: "It's just another way of shouting to the world that they're in love," he said, somewhat disparagingly. Still a third salesman blamed it on a lack of imagination: "Their grandmothers had diamonds, their mothers had diamonds, and they think they've got to have diamonds to make it bona fide."

As to metals, it is safe to bet on platinum to win, white gold to place and yellow gold to show. "When it comes to their marriages, girls get very sentimental," an F street jeweler said. "Some of them pick gold bands because they like the idea of being what they think is old-fashioned. There's a lot of difference between sentiment and sentimentality," this kindly man went on; "but it's very hard for a girl to tell which is which when applying it to her engagement and wedding."

One of the men with whom we discussed the question of a choice in metals believed the current trend in gold wedding bands resulted from the fact that we are all gradually becoming "gold-minded." "Since the price of gold has gone up, gold," he said, "has become more attractive."

* * * *

Sentimental inscriptions engraved in wedding rings are almost a thing of the past. We talked to one jeweler who confessed that he had been engraving "John to Mary" for 27 years before it was brought to his attention that it should have been "John and Mary."

Some of the more popular wedding-ring mottoes of another era were "Our contract was Heaven's act," "In thee, my choice, do I rejoice," and the rococo one which read: "I will be yours while life endures." These have passed out of existence, along with the penchant for diamond sunbursts, ruby horseshoes and heart-shaped lockets . . .

The source of the orange-blossom tradition is very difficult to trace. It is said that the ancient Mandarins of China, the swarthy Queens of the Nile, the fiery Saracens and romantic French—all knew and cherished the little white flowers of the orange tree and with them decked out their brides of long ago. On the other hand, both Spenser and Milton were of the opinion that the orange was the "golden apple presented by Juno to Jupiter on the occasion of their nuptials." You can take your choice.

In the name of economy, wedding bands with diamonds were introduced for the benefit of those couples who did not feel that their limited budget allowed the purchase of both a wedding band and a diamond engagement ring. In the name of necessity, some very strange rings have been introduced into the ceremony. Various ministers have attested to the use of the ring of a church key, a leather ring cut, on the spur of the moment, from the bride's glove, and the story is even told of a clergyman who used a brass curtain ring to marry a duke.

So it looks as if it isn't the ring that matters, nor yet the time or the place, but the girl—or the boy, as the case may be.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Jesse Jones.

WHEN Mr. Wallace and Mr. Ickes and the other Administration authors get through writing about themselves or what they think of the world they ought to turn to Mr. Jesse Jones and do a book on him. It would sell.

BARGERON

There is a man who, with the revolution waging all around him, seems to have gone along quietly with the job that was assigned to him, without the fanfare of publicity, the flinging of dead cats, the beating of breasts or the shouting of epithets. And when this thing through which we are passing is finally appraised it is my guess that Jesse's Reconstruction Finance Corporation will be found to have done more than any other single agency.

His job was not to spend some $3,000,000,000 on a public building program that as an emergency measure has failed, nor to regiment the business of the country, also a failure, nor to turn under our crops. It was to administer the plain, unromantic RFC, which just goes plodding along.

* * * *

It's funny the spotlight hasn't been on Jesse. Goodness only knows how much he has had to spend. For many months our headlines have screamed of major engagements between the revolutionaries and the Tories, of what Ickes, Johnson, Richberg, Wallace and others were doing, of emergency councils, of housing administrations, of inflation, of silver monetization, of everything, seemingly, under the sun. But only an occasional reference would there be to Jesse, a little mention of his having got some more money to lend, of his having let a bank or a railroad have a few millions.

He seems to have the knack of getting some of it back, too. In fact, one gets the impression that through all of the dramatizations and hullabaloo about whether we should swing to the right or to the left, whether we should adopt communism or fascism, Jesse has been conducting a quite efficient business organization.

I don't know but I'd be willing to bet that some day when we think we are lost, when the experiments have collapsed of their own weight, that Jesse will step forward with all of the country's banks, railroads and major industries wrapped in a neat bundle, fully preserved and unhurt.

"Here," he will say, "I saved these for you—had them in my desk all the time. I knew you would want them some day."

* * * *

One gets the impression that this is what Jesse is—a collector of things which the builders of the new civilization throw away. Speaking in hyperbole, of course, Jesse follows them around and every time they throw away a railroad, a bank or a major industry as unfitted for the new scheme, Jesse picks it up, rubs it off and takes it up to his office and places it in file "A" or file "Z" as the case may be. He's gambling on our wanting them again when we quit experimenting.

I'll bet he's got the greatest collection of what the builders of the new civilization would call junk that the world has ever known, and that when we get the mist out of our eyes, the junk will look mighty good to see again, particularly polished up as Jesse will have it.

* * * *

I don't see why he doesn't write a book, too, except that he has associated with him Mr. Norman Baxter who knows the pitfalls of controversy, who knows that while the plaudits sound good for a while they frequently throw the hero off balance and inevitably let him drop pretty hard.

Their theory seems to be to let the others do the writing and the breaking while they take up the wreckage and store it away for the return of normalcy.

A book on Jesse would make good reading, though. He eased up here in the Hoover days and has moved quietly but sure-footedly through the storm. He ought at least to get out a catalogue of the railroads, the banks and industries he has stuck away in his files.

U. S. Silk Faces Threat From Japanese Plants

By David Wills,
Special Correspondent of The Post.

JAPAN'S main industry is the manufacture of textiles. It includes over 20 per cent of the total number of works in the country, employs over 50 per cent of the industrial workers, produces 37 per cent by value of the total industrial output, and over 60 per cent of the total exports. But to ask for specific information on manufacturing costs is to try conversation with an oyster; in each case there's no reply. It's extraordinarily difficult even to see the inside of a mill. This secretiveness has been aggravated by the antagonistic attitude to Japan taken by other countries since the Manchurian incident, but for all that there is no reason why the Japanese should not return the courtesies that have been shown to them in industrial countries whose methods they have studied and copied.

In the early days of the cotton industry yarns were the main export, and up to the Great War the value of cotton tissue exports was less than half that of yarn. But subsequent development was extremely rapid and in 1933 exports were greater than for Lancashire, and totaled 2,000,129 square yards for the year. This expansion continues during 1934. Monthly yarn output runs around 180,000 bales as compared with 250,000 last year, and exports of cotton piece goods during the first five months of 1934 were 22 per cent higher than for the same period last year, and 63 per cent higher than for two years ago.

The reasons given for the competitive power shown by the cotton textile industry include permanent economic advantages, external accidents, favorable labor conditions, artificial stimulation, skill and efficiency in organization.

The main permanent advantage is nearness to Eastern markets, but the time between placing an order and receiving the goods includes the time required for the order to pass through the business organization, and it is in this factor that Japanese textiles have the advantage over older countries. The percentage of total cost represented by transport is small.

Favorable Accidents Of Aid to Industry.

THE industry has had the advantage of many favorable external accidents. Textile manufacture was started after it had been developed in other countries, and machinery was installed of the best available. The World War threw the markets of the world open to Japanese goods, and her industries had time to get into the race without the necessity of a running fight against intense competition. Japanese cotton firms contracted at the beginning of the war for more than a year's supply of raw cotton at low prices; prices rose over 300 per cent, and since Japanese companies do not hedge their cotton purchases, enormous profits were made and reserves built up almost equal to the paid-up capital. The reimposing of the gold embargo in December, 1931, was "anticipated" by the large companies, and further profits made by buying dollars, and importing cotton after the embargo. In fact, luck in speculation has been a main factor in buildnig up the financial strength of the industry.

Perhaps the principal advantages of the Japanese companies are low labor costs, and a docile nonunion ized laboring population. The average daily wage of female cotton spinners fell by 32 per cent from 1.17 yen in 1929, to 0.79 yen in 1932, while the average of retail prices in Tokyo fell about 20 per cent in the same period. Since then there has been an increase in prices, but none in wages. Against the low wage should be set the low money cost of living, and the relatively simple standard of living.

Further, the money wage does not represent the whole remuneration of the worker, since the women live in dormitories provided partly at the companies' expense, and receive schooling, welfare work, and entertainment of various kinds. It is estimated that this additional payment in kind represents about 20 to 25 per cent of the money wage. In the large scale spinning concerns, the women employes are very young—from 14 to 20—and come in from the country for two or three year's work, after which they generally return to their homes to marry.

So far as the small concerns are concerned (about 92 per cent of the firms by number have less than 100 workers, and employ all together about 36 per cent of all the workers in the industry) it is claimed that a high wage is not necessary since there will be other members of the household bringing earnings from other industries and from agriculture. The economic unit is not the individual, but the household. The hours of work are long, and average 10 a day, 265 a month. In the small factories which do not come under the factory laws, conditions are certainly sweated; in the large factories conditions are reported to be good.

Import Duties Encourage Textile Development.

The development of the textile industry has been definitely encouraged by the imposition of import duties designed to give greater protection to those fabrics in which Japanese production has not yet made great progress.

Although there are a very great number of small firms in the industry, 68 per cent of the total output comes from less than 8 per cent of the firms. Diversification is greatest in the weaving section, concentration greatest in the spinning, where four mill combines control 60 per cent of the whole industry. Three companies handle most of the purchasing of raw cotton and the selling of finished products, so that the handling of the material from crop to cloth is better controlled and more economical than for instance in Lancashire.

Although in the past there has been rather lavish distribution of profits to the shareholders, recently there has been a great reinvestment of profits in rebuilding mills, replacing spindles, installing automatic looms and writing down plants and equipment. Layout has been simplified by the introduction of high draught spinning machines and simplex fly-frames. The number of spindles per operative and the output have been steadily increasing; higher counts are being spun, and great skill is shown in the mixture of different cottons to produce an article no better than its purpose requires.

The loss of Chinese trade as a result of the anti-Japanese boycott has been more than made good by the growth of exports to Egypt, South Africa, South America and other small markets, but although the cotton industry seems to be in so prosperous a condition at present, the future is by no means plain sailing. Over 50 per cent of Japan's textile exports go to the British Empire and in this direction lie the constant threats of quotas and higher tariffs. In the manufacture of the coarser materials China may offer serious competition, and in the finer Lancashire has the advantage of an acquired experience which could be made effective by the financial reorganization of the Lancashire industry, and by a simplification of its structure. Is it too much to expect that Lancashire will not always be as stubborn as she seems to be at present?

While it is probable that the cotton industry may lose some of its present advantage over its competitors, it is even more probable that Japanese competition will become increasingly severe in other textile products, wool, linen and artificial silk and woven pure silk materials. American silk manufacturers will soon be demanding further protection against Japanese silk goods, and Bradford, Dundee and Belfast will be hard put to it to avoid the experience of Lancashire.

Uncle Sam's No. 1 "hello man," he is an outstanding authority on public utilities, an intricate field, but to him a glorious adventure of aims and purposes, strengths and weaknesses. Counsel and commissioner for 15 years with the Oklahoma State Corporation Commission, his record as a fact finder and rate reducer attracted National attention. H. I. Phillips' Once Over Dizzy Dean on the Radio.

Q.—Mr. Dean, how does it seem to be a star in a World Series?

A.—In a World Series what else could I be?

Q.—Don't you find it a kick being in the so-called baseball classic?

A.—No. After all, I'm only playing Detroit.

Q.—Would you have preferred to pitch against the Giants?

A.—Why not? I could have slept the last four or five innings.

* * * *

Q.—Your birthplace has been given as in Oklahoma, Kansas and other States. Which is correct?

A.—Why be fussy? Let 'em all split the glory.

* * * *

Q.—How do you explain your remarkable pitching record?

A.—Nobody can explain genius; it just happened to me.

Q.—What is genius?

A.—I dunno, but if they say it about Shakespeare they can say it about me.

* * * *

Q.—How do you like playing with the Cardinals?

A.—I'm always glad to save any team from the rocks.

Q.—What team do you have the most trouble pitching against?

A.—I don't remember ever having any trouble pitching against any team, and I don't expect any.

Q.—Did you ever hear of Christy Mathewson?

A.—No; but he's heard of me.

* * * *

Q.—There are reports that several other clubs have offered enormous prices for you?

A.—Well, if they ain't they're crazy.

Q.—Would you like it if you were sold to the Giants, for instance?

A.—Well, why not? A city like New York can afford the best.

* * * *

Q.—When did you discover you were a pitcher?

A.—I always knew it.

* * * *

Q.—Do you really admit your brother Paul is a better pitcher than you are?

A.—Yes, but he admits I'm a better pitcher than he is; so it's fifty-fifty.

Q.—What is the secret of the Dean brothers' success?

A.—It's no secret; we admit we got everything.

* * * *

Q.—Did you ever hear of Napoleon?

A.—Hear of him? Why I am Napoleon!

Q.—Before you go, will you say something to Admiral Byrd in Little America?

A.—Who?

Q.—Admiral Byrd.

A.—Sure. Hello, sailor! How's things down in Panama City?

A Good Act.

As Quillen Looks at It

Letter From a Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter.

My dear Louise: At church last night you saw a thing that few are privileged to see. You saw a congregation rise and apologize to a few people who had been offended.

Making an apology, especially in public, is one of the most difficult ordeals in human experience.

When an athlete accomplishes an astonishing feat people ask what meat he ate to make himself so strong. If you knew what thing it was that enabled 500 pepeople to do a thing so difficult the knowledge would be a valuable addition to your equipment for the business of living.

Well, they had just finished a two weeks' "protracted meeting" and they had the grace of God in their hearts.

Being a red-head, with a temper, you will have your share of spats with friends and acquaintances. I wonder if you will do all you can to set matters right.

When two people fall out it usually happens that one must humble himself in order to effect a reconciliation.

If both are small-minded both will say: "I'm willing to make up, but he was in the wrong and he's got to make the first move."

When two people quarrel which of them is more likely to make peace overtures? The finer one or the baser one?

Which finds it harder to swallow his pride, the one in the right or the one in the wrong?

Which is more ready to humble himself, the nobler, kinder, more generous one, or the others?

I think you know the right answers. The nobler does the nobler thing. And it is harder to forgive when you are in the wrong.

I have had few quarrels since boyhood, and the only ones I remember with rancor are two that cost me my dignity and self-respect. I never was able to forgive the other fellow because I never was able to forgive myself.

If you are in the wrong stubborn pride forbids you to admit it. Knowing you are wrong, the only way to save your self-respect is to insist that you are right.

It is easy to forgive—to be generous and magnanimous and humble—if your conscience is clear and your self-respect unharmed. Remember that, my dear. If you can't forgive, some memory of being wrong is hurting your vanity. The only blameless man was the one who taught forgiveness of enemies.

Love, DAD.

Mountaineer Turns Poet of Rolling Mill

By Theodore Hall.

CERTAINLY a novelty as a book of poems is Jesse Stuart's "Man With a Bull-tongue Plow" (Dutton, $3). For it is a long, loosely-woven narrative made up of—yes, really—over 700 sonnets. No other sonnet-cycle in literature even approaches that.

THEO. HALL.

Mr. Stuart is a 27-year-old Kentucky mountaineer, who has been long enough away from his farm to spend "eleven months of pure hell, forging steel" in a rolling mill, and to attend for a while a Tennessee college on a ration of 11 and then 7 meals a week. But all the time he was thinking in verse—"the extra steam I gather in living escapes in poetry." The present collection is but a fraction of his output.

Reading these sonnets and quasi-sonnets on mountaineer life, your purist instinct may reach for a blue pencil. They are diffuse, sometimes a bit soft, sometimes a bit over-colloquial. But if you let the pages come to you as the autobiographical record of a genuine and unaffected figure, you will find them singularly fresh, lovely and appealing.

* * * *

Edwin Arlington Robinson's "Amaranth" (Macmillan, $2) is another of his brief "problem novels" put in verse. This time he writes of the misfits—men and women who should have been simple workers with their hands, but who hoisted themselves instead into the world of the professions and the arts. You see examples on every hand; it is poignant enough as a situation. But if Mr. Robinson doesn't lift the reader very high, he assuredly doesn't let him down. The level line of the calm, mature verse goes on and on. He seems to leave the message:

"For most there is more joy if not
In seeing not too well."

* * * *

The poems in Elder Olson's "Thing of Sorrow" (Macmillan, $1.50) lean outwardly on the solemn, unimpassioned, anayltical side. But deeper, there is the passion of a sensitive and distinguished mind. Mr. Olson must be counted among our truest voices.

* * * *

By the same token, there appears less merit in Marya Zaturesnka's "Threshold and Hearth" (Macmillan, $1.50). Her poems push more assiduously toward the "poetic flavor" and result in a kind of sweet wooliness.

* * * *

Vera Brittain's "Poems of the War and After" (Macmillan, $1.25) holds part of her war-time "Verses of a V. A. D." as well as more recent work. She strains after emotion, and the effect is usually pathetic. I very much prefer her as a prose writer—no one who read it can forget her "Testament of Youth."

* * * *

Laura Benet's "Basket for a Fair" (Doubleday Doran, $1.75) is for the most part a diluted, but pleasing, Elinor Wylie. Happiest are her little verses describing birds, bugs and animals—as in these first lines from "The Cricket:"

"Pertinent Puck,
Persistent and undaunted.
Who has not ears to hear
When hope is chanted?"

* * * *

By long odds the most quotable book of verse on today's list is B. A. Heimbinder's "White Conquest: An Epic of Antarctica" (privately printed in New York by the author, 50 cents). As you should guess, it is a narrative of the Byrd expedition. Mr. Heimbinder provides a glossary of the men, planes and ships concerned, and then sets out to tell the story. Scarcely a page is without its particular joy.

"Oh tender hearts that never knew the ways
Of anchor winches and the drenching sprays . . .
Stand at the "City's" antiquated
winch
And from the sea's rebellious clutches wrench
Full 30 fathom length of cable tow,
Where waves are mountainous and hours slow."

And here is a tense moment in an airplane flight:

"And suddenly the wheel turned limp,
And the aileron went slack!
And Balchen cried: 'Quick! Drop some weight
Or else we must turn back!'
And Byrd signed to McKinley,
Who flung the trap-door wide,
And over went a month of food
Down to a glacial solitude;
And the plane leaped like a flame renewed
And spurned the air aside."

Superbly and consummately, this is everything else but good poetry.

* * * *

"Rudyard Kipling's Verse: Inclusive Edition: 1885-1932" is still growing. The latest edition, entirely reset (Doubleday Doran, $5), holds 62 new poems which did not appear in the last revision, five years ago. It is hard to imagine a shelf where this book does not belong.

Out of all these 922 pages of verse—some immortal, some astoundingly bad—my private canon comprises the following poems: The Long Trail; The Gypsy Trail; The Vampire; The Feet of the Young Men; The Female of the Species; The Sons of Martha; Danny Deever; Philadelphia," and those haunting lines from "Rimini:"

"And I've lost Britain, and I've lost Gaul,
And I've lost Rome and, worst of all,
I've lost Lalage!"

But what incomprehensible squeamishness on the part of the editors was it which made them leave out that wise and rollicking poem with the refrain—"And I learned about women from her!"

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

The Anniversary of Tennyson.

On October 6, 1892, at half past one in the morning, in his house at Aldworth in Surrey, England Alfred Lord Tennyson died. He was 83 years old.

If he had planned the stage setting for his death, it could not have been more fittingly poetically, dramatically accomplished. He lay unconscious but breathing regularly, on his bed, his figure flooded with the bright light of the full moon streaming in through the window. His dying hand clasped a copy of Shakespeare, which he had asked for a few days before, and which he had kept with him every moment. His finger inside the book rested on the famous dirge in the play "Cymbeline," which had always been a favorite with him, and which he had imitated in his youth. This book was placed in his coffin.

He was buried in Westminister Abbey on October 12, next to Robert Browning.

It would seem that he had accomplished a great deal; but he said: "So much to do, so little done." Yet he had published work in his teens, and on the day he died John Drew was appearing on the American stage in his play "The Foresters."

This is the dirge written by Shakespeare in "Cymbeline" which Tennyson had with him as he died.

Fear no more the heat of the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and taken thy wages;
Golden lads and grils all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Fear no more the frown of the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak;
The sceptre, learning, physic must All follow this, and come to dust.

Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Nor the all-dreaded thunder-
stone;

Fear not slander, censure rash;
Thou hast finished joy and moan;
All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Palace Offers De Mille Film Of Cleopatra

Is Done on a Huge Scale; Diva and Ballet Score; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"CLEOPATRA." Paramount picturization of a story by Waldemar Young and Vincent Lawrence, adapted to the screen by Bartlett Cormack, featuring Claudette Colbert, Warren William and Henry Wilcoxon, with Gertrude Michael, Ian Keith, C. Aubrey Smith, Joseph Schildkraut, Arthur Hohl, Irving Pichel, Robert Warwick, William Farnum and Harry Beresford. Directed by Cecil B. De Mille. Previewed Saturday, September 29.

Compressing the flamboyant episodes in the life of an harassed Egyptian queen into the brief running time of a film of normal length, "Cleopatra" presents a spectacle of cumulative color, movement and power.

While "Cleopatra" will not rank as one of Cecil Blount De Mille's great achievements, it at least perpetuates his reputation as a master of grandiose effects, turbulent action and extravagant climaxes. What deficiencies impress themselves upon the minute observer spring from Mr. De Mille's willingness to permit a disturbingly modern note to creep into the early sequences of his play—when Julius Caesar and his staff might quite as well be running a twentieth century office as plotting the fall of Egypt—and a partially disjointed and episodic treatment to mar the perfect continuity of the most poignant periods of the drama's tragic climax and denouement.

Antony Is Chief Lover.

In fashioning the pattern of his dramatic narrative, De Mille has evidently gone to the same source material that has served Shakespeare, Shaw, and numerous others in their day. The failure of Caesar to bring the scheming siren of the Nile to quick and abject submission, after she has dulled his conqueror's spirit with seductive hints of a short cut to the riches of India through her domains, and his murder in the Forum serve scarcely more than an introductory function leading to the greater passion, fury and desperate consequences of Marc Antony's infatuation with one of antiquity's fabulous courtesans.

It is the utter surrender of Antony to Cleopatra's wiles and his downfall at the hands of the Roman legions under Octavian that affords the raison d'etre of the drama's heroic intervals dedicated to the shambles of mighty conflict, carnage and destruction. Out of the ruins of her empire Cleopatra salvages only a tiny asp, whose deadly venom leaves her rigid on her throne, Marc Antony dead at her side, as the triumphant hosts enter to claim her as hostage.

De Mille has wrought with his characteristic genius for overpowering effect in these final sequences of his picture. They are mammoth, horrifying and magnificent.

Cast Remains Modern.

The cast makes no visible effort to assume the mannerisms or action or speech of the characters they impersonate. The lines have the tang of modernity and are delivered as if they were in a George S. Kaufman play of today's Broadway rather than the Appian Way of Caesar's time. Even in his death scene, Caesar does not speak the classic "Et tu, Brute," but translates it into the simple English of "And you, too, Brutus." This is typical of the entire treatment of the work. Its forcefulness lies in its pictorial grandeur.

If Cleopatra was exactly like Miss Claudette Colbert, then Miss Colbert gives an exceptionally fine performance in the title role. Warren Williams, it will be found, bears a striking resemblance to all of the extant sculptures of the Roman general, and Henry Wilcoxon, the importation for the role of Marc Antony, plays the part in the gladiatorial, or William Muldoon, manner. Gertrude Michael is a strikingly beautiful Calpurnia and an ensemble of thousands contributes to the picturesqueness of scenes that are enhanced by myriad touches of De Mille symbolism and subtle suggestion.

A new Walt Disney Silly Symphony in natural color, "The Flying Mouse," as clever as they all are; Pete Smith's exposition of the intricacies of "Pro Football," an interesting analysis of the gridiron game as played by professionals, and the Metrotone News supplement a feature that must be catalogued among the "super specials."

Earle

"ONE NIGHT OF LOVE." Columbia picturization of a story by Dorothy Speare and Charles Beahan, starring Grace Moore, with Tullio Carminati, Lyle Talbot, Mona Barrie, Louis Alberni and Andre de Segurola. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Previewed Monday, October 1.

Grace Moore's entrancing voice, displayed to tremendous advantage in a succession of the most popular arias in the repertoire of the Metropolitan, transmutes the trite and commonplace story of "One Night of Love" into one of the screen sensations of the year.

Reduced to its skeletonized essentials, this fable of a gifted young prima donna and her increasing dependence upon the handsome maestro who has lifted her from obscurity and placed her on the road to fame, as has been remarked in these columns before, would sound remarkably like a modernized and slightly renovated version of Du Maurier's "Trilby," with love substituted for the sinister power of mesmerism.

This, however, is a specious complaint to lodge against a picture which succeeds so admirably in combining the musical splendors of grand opera with the development of a simple, everyday story of a romantic courtship, without impairing the integrity of the one or vitiating the dramatic purpose of the other.

Music Builds Story.

There is a progresive importance of music in this film that appropriately keeps pace with the vocal development of its stellar figure. As Mary, the American girl impersonated by Miss Moore, becomes

Form New Acting Partnership

Elissa Landi and Cary Grant comprise what should be an effective combination in the costellar roles of Paramount's picturization of "Enter Madam," the noted stage success, soon to be released. They are posed here before a studio mantlepiece that will might dwarf players of less poise and assertive personality. Both, incidentally, attracted notice first in Europe.

a voice of constantly increasing promise in the opera houses of Europe, her interest in Bill, the sweetheart of her youth, gradually diminishes and her love for Monteverdi, her mentor, guide and severest critic, proportionately grows. Then comes the inevitable break. Monteverdi, with a catholicity characteristic of one of his temperament and calling, has a few too many past attachments. In a huff, Mary leaves him and accepts an offer from the Metropolitan, for which she is not yet ready.

Conscious of her shortcomings and, like a splendid fellow, honest in the white-hot ardor of his love, Monteverdi follows and is in the prompter's box when Mary makes her quaking entrance to make her debut in "Madam Butterfly." The inspiration of his presence makes her "One Fine Day" aria a triumph of the first water.

Crescendo of Artistry.

The story of the rise of an unknown voice student in Milan to the heights of operatic stardom is merely a background for the introduction of "Ah For E Lui," from "Traviata;" "Ciri-Biri-Bin," the song that brings her to Monteverdi's notice in a little Italian restaurant; "Habanara," from Bizet's "Carmen," and finally that superb rendering of the gem from Puccini's "Butterfly." This is a crescendo of musical artistry that traces the whole effect of the film.

Miss Moore, in this vehicle, has already been extolled to a point where nothing remains to be said about her, except, possibly, that her work will be looked back upon as the factor that created a new point of view toward opera in the best minds of Hollywood. The principal difficulty will be to find more Grace Moores.

Tullio Carminati, to all intents and purposes, is perfectly cast as Monteverdi, and Lyle Talbot is a personable and irresponsible young American suitor who knows when he is whipped. Luis Alberni elevates a minor part to the level of a stellar bit of comic character creation. Mona Barrie is the feminine "threat" and an extensive operatic ensemble adds to the picture's atmospheric charm.

Stage Bill Excels.

The stage bill is one of comparable excellence in its respective field. Don Bestor and his Radio Orchestra dominate it with the splendid moderation of their playing and the cleverness of the specialists they introduce. These include Joy Lynne, Mr. Bestor's secretarial songstress; Neil Buckley, barytone, and "Ducky" Yontz, past master of unique vocal effects. All three scored flatteringly. So did the band in all its numbers, and Don, personally, in his exquisite solo number at the vibraharp—if that is what it was.

Others introduced by the sartorially sumptuous Miss Sieber include "Cookie" Bowers, the voice of the cartoon comedies, whose sewing-on-a-button, early rising and swimming-pool skits are still among the theater's convulsing hilarities; Paul and Mino Ghezzi, peers of all gymnasts and hand-balancers, and "Rogers and Wynne," assisted by dancers of an older generation, in "Now and Then," a carnival of hard-shoe tap and buck-and-wing dancing.

Universal News and orchestral overture, with Bert Granoff, complete a bill of extraordinary artistic and entertainment value.

Columbia

"NOTORIOUS SOPHIE LANG." Paramount picturization of a story by Frederick Irving Anderson, adapted to the screen by Anthony Veiller, featuring Gertrude Michael and Paul Cavanaugh, with Arthur Byron, Alison Skipworth, Leon Errol and Ferdinand Gottschalk. Directed by Ralph Murphy. Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Harraman Mangum.

Sophie Lang is young, blonde, charming and aggravatingly sure of herself. She has the New York police force, in the persons of Inspector Parr and his cohorts, tearing out their sparse grey hairs and praying to Lady Luck to deliver the blonde menace into their hands. For Sophie, you see, has a peculiar contumacy in acquiring jewelry to which she has not the slightest claim.

Then upon the scene comes Max Bernard, an international crook, invading Sophie's territory. Sophie resents this no end, and sets in motion sundry and various machinations to upset Monsieur Bernard's apple cart. Indubitably matters would have become more and more complicated if a cherubic Dan Cupid had not appeared upon the scene and woven a net for the slick young thieves.

Is Good Entertainment.

"The Notorious Sophie Lang" is a bit hard on the credulity, but good entertainment withal. Gertrude Michael, as Sophie, proves herself to be both versatile and pulchritudinous. Paul Cavanaugh, as Max Bernard, is as suave and cosmopolitan as gentlemen crooks usually are—in the cinema. Alison Skipworth makes Aunt Nellie amusingly daffy, and Arthur Byron, Leon Errol, Athur Hoyt and Ferdinand Gottschalk are interestingly cast.

Ralph Murphy, who directed the picture, was the guiding hand of "70,000 Witnesses," and, while he had less to work on in this story than he had in the earlier one, he frequently slips a cog and the result is a bit jerky and never quite absorbing.

Added attractions include an animated cartoon of Willie Whooper, "The Cave Man;" York and King, in a dull little comedy, entitled "Domestic Bliss," and Paramount News.

RKO-Keith's

"THE RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD." RKO-Radio picturization of a screen play by Norman Krasna, featuring Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea, with Henry Stephenson, Fay Wray, Reginald Denny, Beryl Mercer, George Meeker, Herbert Bunston, Burr McIntosh and Edgar Norton. Directed by William A. Seiter. Previewed in September.

It is a little to be doubted that the richest girl in the world would go to quite the extremes adopted by Dorothy Hunter in "The Richest Girl in the World" to determine the precise degree of a handsome young swain's devotion.

In the lives of vivacious young women who find an exorbitant amount of the world's wealth in their possession, I presume there is always the temptation to be sure that the boy friend is really after them and not their money. But I doubt if so fabulous an heiress would impress her secretary into service as a double to assume her identity while she pretended to be the amanuensis, just to make it tougher than it would be otherwise for both her and him.

That, however, is what happens in this sprightly and thoroughly entertaining comedy-drama in which Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea are the young people confronted with a difficult problem—she to determine where she's at in the matter of love; he to try to figure out who is who, and, if so, why. It all gets a little complicated from time to time and almost too serious to keep pace with the breezy humors of the play's lighter moments, but in the end adds up to a pretty enjoyable hour or two of romantic pastiming.

Cast Take It Seriously.

Miriam Hopkins plays the part of the millionairess—or was it billionairess—in deadly earnest. She is an exceedingly sincere and distraught young woman, trying her darndest to believe that Anthony Travis is all for her and doesn't give a hang for all that dough! Tony, on the other hand, woos the secretary, in the attractive person of Fay Wray, and thus gets himself on the spot. How it all works out, through the agency of some amusing action, much well-written dialogue and the final intervention of wiser heads, is what any judicious amusement seeker will want to go to R. K. O.-Keith's to find out.

Henry Stephenson, Reginald Denny, Beryl Mercer and many others whose names appear in the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks contribute generously to a film that is much better than its title.

A song reel, consisting of the college chanties that will be heard on any first-rate football field these autumn days, and a new issue of the Pathe News are among the auxiliaries that aid in making this a bill that should be able to hold its own even in a week of stiffest competition.

Metropolitan

"BELLE OF THE NINETIES." Paramount picturization of a story by Mae West, starring the author, with Roger Pryor, John Mack Brown, John Miljan, Katherine De Mille, Warren Hymer, Stuart Holmes and Tyler Brooke. Directed by Leo McCarey. Reviewed (extended run) by W. A. Whitney.

No secret any more, this "surprise show" at the Metropolitan. It's Mae West as "Belle of the Nineties," To the uncounted thousands who witnessed and applauded the first two offerings of Miss West, "Belle of the Nineties" needs no further recommendation than the statement that their favorite star is being presented in vehicle No. 3. To the others, to whom the one-time stage star is only legend, the current picture will reveal amply the reasons for her popularity.

"Belle of the Nineties," a typical Mae West opus, revolves around the adventures of one Ruby Carter, St. Louis cabaret singer, who goes to New Orleans' "Sensation House," and there continues to sing her way to fame and fortune and further to justify the establishment's name. Her path is, naturally, strewn with men—with John Miljan playing the proprietor and de luxe gambler; John Mack Brown the playboy of the day, and Roger Pryor, a small-time boxer befriended to the point of matrimony by Ruby.

Commendable as are these players—as well as Katherine De Mille, Warren Hymer, Stuart Holmes, Tyler Brooks, and a host of others—it is Miss West who is quite the entire attraction.

Not content with lifting the feature from its run at the Earle, the short subjects have also been taken over. "The Girl at the Ironing Board," a Merrie Melodie based on the "Dames" hit song; "Radio Announcers Revue," a better than average song-and-dance reel, and the combined releases of Paramount and Universal News round out a program that should break the present house record.

Loew's Fox

"OUTCAST LADY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Michael Arlen's novel of "The Green Hat," adapted to the screen by Zoe Akins, starring Constance Bennett, with Herbert Marshall, Hugh Williams, Ralph Forbes, Henry Stephenson, Mrs. Pat Campbell, Lumsden Hare, Elizabeth Allan and Robert Loraine. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Previewed Tuesday morning, October 2.

Modified slightly, as it has been, to meet the demands of an awakened ethical sense since it was last released as a silent picture, impeccably produced and directed and performed with their accustomed finesse by a cast of real distinction, "Outcast Lady" still is a morbid, depressing and tragic story.

Based on Michael Arlen's sophisticated novel of "The Green Hat," the new film which brings Constance Bennett to the screen as Iris March, and Herbert Marshall, as Napier, is strictly adult entertainment, and rather unpleasant adult entertainment, at that. It paints a canvass of disappointment, moral and physical deterioration, suicide and violent deaths. Ostensibly a love story, this recital of the penalties imposed upon a great number of people by the profligacy of a single family confronts the spectator with a procession of unrealized hopes, defeated purposes and futile striving.

Story Is Well Known.

The story probably is too well known to justify repetition or outline here. Katharine Cornell played it on the stage and Greta Garbo achieved one of her major successes in it on the screen. It is the tale of a girl who roamed the world suffering untold tortures of the spirit after having married the wrong man and watched her true love marry another. After her husband had killed himself, her brother unseated his reason with drink and her lover's family persistently refused to countenance her, Iris drives her high-powered car into the tree that was a youthful trysting place with Napier and quite successfully "gets away from it all."

Miss Bennett assumes the title role with something less than the warmth the character requires. She is chill, aloof, and lacking in that blazing intensity needed to make the drama strike fire. Herbert Marshall, as Napier, plays with deep and convincing earnestness the young career man who was willing to brave the wrath of his father and family for the sake of the girl denied him through the years for reasons he did not comprehend untoo late. Ralph Forbes brings to the role of Iris' husband more poise and charm than that handsome cad deserved, and Hugh Williams is sufficiently the neurotic brother to make the part memorable. Henry Stephenson is, as usual, splendid as Napier's father, and Mrs. Patrick Campbell barely visible in one brief scene of no consequence whatever.

A daring innovation is successfully executed on the Fox stage this week, where the Michel Fokine Ballet, appearing for the first time in the National Capital, provides the entire interval of living entertainment customarily devoted to vaudeville.

Contrast in Ballets.

Three ballets are presented—Ravel's "Bolero," converted into a choreographic conflict over two fascinating dancers in Spain; "Les Sylphides," a shimmeringly beautiful exposition of the highest artistry of which the ballet form of dance is capable, to music by Chopin, and "Prince Igor," a robust physical exposition of the color, movement and frenzy of an episode in Oriental legend. These lengthy and skillfully diversified dramas in motion are interspersed with selections by an instrumental trio consisting of violin, cello and harp and the interpolation, between the "Les Sylphides" and "Prince Igor" divertissements, of the "Prince Igor" overture conducted by Phil Lampkin.

The artistic accomplishment of Betty Eisner, Winona Bimboni, Leon Varges, Dorothy Hallberg, Dorothy Denton, Stella Clausen, Edna Veralle and Harry Haskins, in the solo parts, as well as the graceful ensembles participated in by a corps of unusual number, won the reward of an ovation from a capacity house at the conclusion of each number.

In blazing an approach to a higher level of artistic effort, Loew's Fox has revealed a public taste that surprisingly enough finds in the intricacies of classic choreography a form of entertainment it can embrace with both pleasure and enthusiasm.

Roosevelt 'Acts To End Breaks In 'Weak' Jails

Confers With Cummings on Richmond Escape of Desperadoes.

The Department of Justice is trying to improve the conditions of prisons so as to prevent such escapes as those of Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, notorious desperadoes, who fled the Richmond City Jail after fatally wounding a guard, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

At his press conference the Chief Executive disclosed that after the men escaped he conferred with Attorney General Cummings. Cummings explained, the President said, that the Federal Prison Board made it a rule not to place Federal prisoners in State or city prisons which are not approved by the Federal Prison Board.

In August, the Attorney General told the President, the Prison Board decided that the Richmond Prison did not meet Federal standards and it was decided to remove all Federal prisoners from it.

The search for the escaped pair went on yesterday with no leads developed as to their whereabouts. According to the Associated Press, the theory of Richmond authorities is the men are still in hiding in that vicinity.

City authorities are also assembling evidence to be presented to a special grand jury which will investigate the circumstances of the break. Judge Don P. Halsey, of Lynchburg, will go to Richmond next week to supervise the investigation.

A rule was issued yesterday against the Lynchburg City Jail keeper to show cause why he should not be removed from office because of the recent escape of two prisoners.

EARLE

EARLE HAS THE BIG SHOWS

They Make Hound Dog Laugh.

Do you think you could tell which way a wagon went, if it rolled into a stream about as wide as a house, and that stream had a hard rocky bottom that the wheels didn't leave any tracks on? You could not; neither could Mr. Man or Uncle Joe or Tom. Yes, they had all come there to help Mr. Man find his wagon, but they couldn't tell a thing about the way it had gone. They didn't get there till away late in the day, for it took Mr. Man some time to get home, fast as he ran; some more time to make up his mind what to do, and still some more time to get Uncle Joe and Tom. They didn't much want to go with him to hunt for that man that was as big as a house, and had a gun, too; but after a lot of talk they all got their guns and dogs and went to Cool Spring. They tried to get the dogs to follow the tracks, but a dog couldn't do any better in following a donkey or "strange" animal in the water than a man could. They would just run around and around and bark every time their masters tried to get them to hunt.

There were no tracks, and so they didn't know what to hunt. Uncle Joe would go to the spring and look at the tracks that Hee-Haw and the wagon had made there, and then he would follow them down to where the stream crossed the road. There he would stop, pull off his hat, scratch his bald spot and say, "Well, if that don't beat all!" He did that same thing about a dozen times, and Mr. Man kept right on telling them and showing them just how and where the owl flew down and grabbed his hat. And then he would take them back up the road and show them where he picked up his hat while he was running. And Mr. Man agreed with his wife that the "strange animal" was a man and that he was as high as the house. "No sir," said Mr. Man, "I'm not ashamed of running from a man like that, even if he didn't have a gun. He is a giant, that man is."

It would have tickled Billy Possum to see the way Hound Dog, who had come with Tom, would keep running down to the stream to drink water. It was about the best excuse to get away from the crowd, so he could laugh. Nobody had told him about what Blackie had smoked out of his pipe, but I bet anything that if he had been in a terrible hurry to bark a howdy-do to a donkey, he would have been at Blackie's smokehouse door before dark.

Mr. Man stopped everybody that passed on the road and asked them if they had seen Hee-Haw, but of course they hadn't. There wasn't anything they could do but to call the dogs and go home, and that's what they did.

Mrs. Borah's Arrival Here Unheralded

Returns From Idaho to Open Connecticut Avenue Apartment.

Senator Stays in Boise to Relax and Fish for Trout.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Characteristically, Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of Senator Borah, slipped back into town a few days ago, and until she was spied yesterday morning walking briskly up Connecticut avenue, wearing the smartest thing in deep blue velveteen frocks, with a hat to match, and a beautiful fur hung jauntily over her shoulders, told nobody of her arrival.

"Little Borah," as most of her close friends call her, has been spending the summer in the West, and returned earlier in the week to open her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue, to have everything in order when the Senator returns from several months of campaigning in Idaho. Mrs. Borah's faithful maid, "Daisy," took a vacation this summer, and now the apartment, which was closed all summer has to be reconditioned for the arrival of the "master of the house."

The Senator is lingering in Boise and is taking brief trips to the mountain streams of Idaho where he can relax and think deep thoughts while baiting mountain trout. The Rocky Mountain Club is a favorite place for Senator Borah when he wants real fishing.

Mrs. Borah had a busy summer and as she describes it her "heart was as big as the Capitol" and her house in Boise, which they leased this summer from Bishop Barnwell, of Idaho, was the rendezvous for all of her young nieces with their friends. What with "one poor maid, as deaf as a post," "Aunt Mary" had a busy time answering telephone calls for the popular nieces, one of whom spent a very successful season in Washington with Senator and Mrs. Borah two winters ago.

In between the visits of relatives, Mrs. Borah took brief trips to her former home in Moscow, Idaho, and to Portland, Oreg., where her sisters live, and even managed a trip through the Yellowstone National Park before coming East. For three weeks Mrs. Borah had her close friend, Mrs. Mark Sullivan, and her daughter, Miss Narcissa Sullivan, who had been in California visiting the former President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, with her. The Sullivans went to the West Coast via the Panama Canal early in the summer, and returned home by train, visiting in several places en route. Mrs. Borah, of course, was delighted to hear news of the Hoovers, and with Mrs. Sullivan and her daughter, took several trips into the beautiful mountainous country around Boise.

This week-end, Mrs. Borah will entertain young Mr. George Taylor, of Boise, a student at the University of Virginia, who with several of his classmates is here to attend the Navy-Virginia football game this afternoon at Griffith Stadium. The Senator will return to Washington the end of the month.

Capital Girls At West Point

Tonight there will be much merrymaking at West Point. Cullum Hall, the handsome white stone edifice with tall columns, which overlooks the majestic Hudson, will be the scene of the "Ring Hop."

One moment that stands out in the life of a "kaydet" is when he receives his class ring. For days afterward the first classmen go about carefully guarding their newly weighed-down left hands from rude contacts with stone-chipping doors, tables and other objects detrimental to the life and beauty of a ring.

This evening the larger ballroom on the second floor of Cullum Hall—with its "340" brilliant lights, will be simply crowded with "kaydets" resplendent in their full dress grays, and their "femmes" (the name given to all of the young ladies who go up to the Point), attired in gay velvets, satins and crepes. In between the dances, provided the breezes from the river are not too chilly, the merrily chatting couples will go down the broad marble stairway and out onto the balcony, to gather in groups and talk over the game of the afternoon, between Army and Davidson, which will take place in Michie Stadium, up near Lusk Reservoir, high in the hills behind the garrison and overlooking the "plain" where so many thrilling reviews are held.

Along about the middle of the evening the first classmen will leave their fair partners for a brief moment to form in companies, and will march to the far end of the ballroom, where there is usually a huge papier-mache model of a ring standing upright. This serves as a background for that bit of the ceremony when each cadet with his femme stands before his company officer, who gives the class ring to the young lady and she in turn places it on the left hand of the future officer. From then on the few remaining hours speed by until the soft, almost sad strains of "Army Blue" bring the hop to a close.

Among the members of Washington's younger set who will leave this morning for the Military Academy are Miss Ansley Spalding, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Isaac Spalding, Miss Jean Brown, Miss Marjorie McDowell, Miss Suzanne Gill, Miss Mary Hobson, Miss Betty Wall and Miss Alice Daugherty.

Delta House Displays Pictures of Two Cabinet Members.

PICTURES of Brother Dern and Brother Wallace occupy prominent places in the Delta Tau Delta House on K street. This is the only fraternity that can boast of including two Cabinet members. In the 32 years of its existence history has frequently been made at the fraternity house. Old timers recall when Champ Clark and James T. Mann, late Speaker and the Republican floor leader of the House 20 years ago, would meet there to fight things out—and fix things up. It is a coincidence that their busts face each other even now in the corridor leading to the rotunda on the House side of the Capitol. Champ Clark's Senator son, Bennett Clark, is a member of the Delts and frequently visits the house. Senators Alben Barkley and Park Trammel are also members.

• • • •

During the war nearly all the fraternity brothers living there wore the uniform of their ranks, ranged from private to colonel, and while they dared not speak familiarly to each other on the street, a colonel and a private could engage in a friendly tussle inside the house if they felt so disposed—and they frequently did.

The Delts have had a nomadic existence, because there have been times when it was quite difficult to dig up the rent. In years when they felt prosperous they would spread themselves in the finest old homes in Washington. The house they occupy now is one of the more distinguished old homes with high-ceiling drawing rooms that were the scene of brilliant entertaining in years gone by.

• • • •

Many jolly parties have taken place since the brothers took it over. The tacky party held each year is the talk of the campus at George Washington University and the brothers have monthly dances there. Perhaps the most interesting house they have ever occupied was the famous "Little Green House on K street."

• • • •

Bruce Bielaski, former head of the Department of Investigation; Claude W. Owens, a former president of the Board of Trade; Adam Bieler, W. C. Demming and Percy C. Adams are some of the well-known alumni. Camden R. McAtee, attorney, takes great interest in the Delt House and has helped in obtaining furniture and rugs for the place from alumni living in Washington. It is amazing what the boys can do with cast-off furniture with a little paint and patient work.

Many romances have had their inception in the Delt House, and perhaps the most notable one was when the National president of the fraternity, Harold Thorpe, met his bride there. Among the couples that appeared at a tea held last Sunday afternoon were Ozie Wray, football player, and Frances Goodrich, acclaimed the prettiest girl at George Washington University; George Hudson and Florence Moriarity, Raymond Dicky and Janet Seehusen, Margaret Mayo and Kenneth Patrum, Roger Lloyd and Jean De Pue.

Miss Rosalind Mellor To Wed Charles Blair

Mr. and Mrs. Barry Stephen Mellor, of Narberth, Pa., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rosalind Clover Mellor, to Mr. Charles Woodbury Blair, son of Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, of Washington and Easthampton, Long Island.

They will wear gowns of yellow satin, fashioned like that of the matron of honor, with burnt orange velvet jackets. Their hats and shoes will match the jackets. They will carry bouquets of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums. William Mitchell, jr., son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Mitchell, of Middleburg, dressed in ivory satin, will be ring bearer.

The bride will be assisted in receiving by her mother, who will wear a gown of black velvet, with hat and shoes to match, and a corsage of gardenias, and by the bridegroom's mother, who is wearing a blue velvet dress, with accessories to match, and a corsage of gardenias.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Hammond will leave for St. Johns, Canada, the latter wearing an ensemble of hunter's green rough crepe with hat and shoes and bag to match, with a corsage of gardenias. Upon their return they will reside at the St. Paul Apartments, in Baltimore, Md., where the bridegroom is a prominent attorney.

A number of entertainments have been given for the bride. Among them was a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White, who entertained for the bridal party and out-of-town guests last night.

Color and Line Are Most Important Items For Men to Consider in Selecting Wardrobe

General Rules For Purchaser Are Outlined

Scientific Formula Will Aid in Choice of Accessories.

IF WE COULD suppose for a minute that the sense of sight were unessential to humankind, then color and line in design, particularly in men's clothing, would have no special meaning. But since sight is one of the most acute and useful of man's senses, then we must consider it gravely in dealing with man and his clothes.

How often have you heard it said, "He spends fabulous sums on his clothes, yet he always looks sloppy." It's too often true. Unguided, the uninitiated wanders in a bog of salesman's influence, and to mix a metaphor . . . not seeing the forest for the trees . . . or the complete ensemble during the individual purchase. He who has been so enmeshed need have no special gift for color harmony . . . rather merely a small memory for a few general rules.

The tall fellow inclined to thinness would like to look as if he had a little more heft. The short, squattish man wants height. The stout fellow wants to look trim . . . and so on down the line. A natural situation, wherein Dame Nature again sets in motion her laws of reducing species to a mean.

Waistlines Attract First Notice.

To attain this end, man seeks through his clothes to fool the eye. That organ in man moves with greater celerity sideways than up and down. This is due in large measure to the fact that the powerful muscles that move the eye are attached to the sides, while those top and bottom of the eye are less strong and less in use. In fact when we look at a tall building we move our heads rather than our eyes. Stop, for a minute, then, and realize that waistlines, and other lines traveling horizonitally first excite our notice and may easily fool us.

Here are a few rules that are by no means ironclad, but safe to follow. Tall, thin men should avoid vertical stripes, three-button single and breasted suits and exaggeratedly high waistlines, since these tend to exaggerate height. The short, squat man should avoid bold checks, plaids, overchecks, double breasted models, since these give appearance of bulk.

In 1866 Helmholtz discovered and proved that the three primary colors of the light spectrum are red, green and violet, from which all other colors are made. These colors can best be verbally described as the red of a match flame, the green of an emerald and natural violet amethyst. By combining the green and violet rays, we get a sensation in our eyes that we call blue. By combining the red and green rays, we get the sensation called yellow. By combining the violet and red rays, we get a sensation called crimson.

You will notice as the colors progress in either direction they form harmonies, because each has a little of the previous color in its body. Thus orange, yellow, yellow-green and green all use yellow as a binder (orange being a mixture of yellow and red, and green a mixture of yellow and blue). Thus harmonies all have a little of a definite saturating color or binder to link the whole together. This is the safeguard that will help you pick your accessories to complement your suit. If your suit is a rich, warm brown (made by mixing violet and yellow), then any colors containing reds, yellows and some dark blues will go well. If your suit is navy blue (made by mixing blue with its complementary color, red), then accessories that have red and blue in them are your safest bet.

Selecting Accessories.

When a painter paints a picture and the colors look too raw and garish he tries laying a wash or varnish of some neutral transparent color over it to bind the whole. That is what should be done mentally in selecting proper accessories for your ensemble. If your suit is a lovat shade and you want to wear a yellow tie with it, make sure the yellow is of a high or low key blue-yellow (a green of course), that the shirt is a blue green cast or tone, and so on. You can work out interesting ideas of your own with paper and pencil, but for those who are too busy the following suggestions are offered:

With dark gray suit, shirts of light blue poplin, white or gray or reddish striped madras, with tab or pinned collar are recommended; in ties, black, red and silver herringbone rep stripe, Macclesfield red and silver figures on black grounds, or black ground rep with fine hunter yellow stripe; handkerchiefs may be white linen with wide border to harmonize with tie, hunting yellow with foulard, or marron madder with Indian design. The best choice of socks is black, ribbed or clocked in red or yellow clocks; and shoes, black.

With navy blue suit, wear shirts in wine and blue tones, or white; ties, Spittalsfield figures, allover patterns or red stripes, either the blue or wine ground predominating; handkerchiefs to match figure or pattern in tie. (Madders very smart); socks, navy with wine clocks, black with red clocks or gem blue clocks; shoes, Cordovan, oxblood or black.

With brown suit, shirts of hunter's yellow, light greens, beige and oxblood; ties in brown and yellow, plum, or sage green; handkerchiefs in hunting yellow, green-figured foulards, lavender linen with deep plum border or sage green with yellow polka dots in eccentric spacings; hose in fancy browns, bottle green or deep plum, and shoes in tan or oxblood will be fashion right.

Just any suit won't do for the man who is too tall or too short, too thin or too stout. Bolder patterns and horizontal lines add to bulk, as shown in the figure on the left. Vertical lines slenderize and add to height as shown at right.

What Today Means

It might prove advisable to be very cautious of strangers on this date, especially if there is an exchanging of money taking place.

You may be placed in a position where you will be given the opportunity of greatly increasing your popularity by seizing the chance of doing a kindly act. Some friends may find it an enjoyable pastime to tear to shreds a mutual acquaintance's reputation. You can display excellent judgment if you refrain from joining in this malicious form of gossip, which may reach the victim's ears.

If a woman, and October 6 is your natal day, you may greatly advance your interests if you are a little more inclined to take the initiative. Do not depend on other people for advice or guidance. You have more than enough mentality to enable you to formulate your own plans. If you will cultivate the habit of using your own judgment in important matters, you may be surprised to see how readily you can overcome what appear to be obstacles. Love may help you find a solution to all your problems. Marriage is the logical life for you.

The child born on October 6 usually, when it reaches its teens, has a remarkable ability for self-expression.

Film Make-Up Expert Tells Stars' Troubles

By Frances Mangum.

THE STARS that shine and twinkle in the movies would soon be lusterless if they ceased cultivating their beauty.

According to Mel Berns, head of the make-up department of R.-K.-O. Studios, screen stars have found by experience that their work takes heavy toll on both skin and hair unless both are skillfully and persistently cared for. Their hair, he said, seldom has a chance to rest. It must be constantly dressed and curled. The abundance of make-up which it is necessary to use drifts into the hair and thence to the scalp. Then again, they work in soundproof stages most of the time and have little opportunity to benefit from the fresh air and sunshine. In addition, players sometimes bleach and dye their hair to fit certain roles. As a result it is most important to coax the hair back to its normal shade.

Mr. Berns said Katherine Hepburn has her own special method of keeping her hair beautiful. She has it shampooed every morning, using four eggs, the yolks and whites beaten separately until they are like foam. The yolk is first rubbed into the scalp for about five minutes, and then the whites in the same way. This procedure is followed by a rinse of fresh lemon juice and water. Miss Hepburn also has a hot oil shampoo once a week.

"This treatment," the make-up director declared, "is very good for red hair like Miss Hepburn's, as it brings out all the highlights and makes it gleam like copper."

To curl her hair she rolls it up wet on paper rolls and allows it to dry. Then it is taken down and brushed vigorously until the curl is loose and soft.

In an emergency, Mr. Berns said, the studio uses a special dry shampoo.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion, without being foppish, is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette governing conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the what, when and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

Derby for Football?

SIR: Yes, if the coat, scarf and gloves are of a dressy nature.

New Coat Best Bet.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: Would you recommend remodeling a tailcoat bought in 1926 at a very expensive tailor's? ECONOMY.

SIR: The remodeling cost would be almost as much as you would have to pay for a new coat, to bring it up to date . . . then it would be a patched-up job.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: The letter printed some days ago, signed "Eager Lover," touches on one of my pet topics, for I have had similar experiences, only I have had a number of boy friends.

I am young and have traveled a good deal, and there is nothing I enjoy more in a social way than interesting conversation: deep, stimulating and personal. But I have found most of the American young men with whom I've associated to be poor conversationalists. Can you tell me if this condition is general? Also, I have noticed that American men of the intellectual class seem to "talk down" to their women friends. What do you think is the cause of this?

* * * *

I shall look forward with much pleasure to reading your reply to my queries. And I shall appreciate your kindness.

COSMOPOLITAN.

Why We Can't Talk.

DEAR COSMOPOLITAN: Conversation in its best sense has some time since fallen into disrepute with the majority of otherwise well-enough educated young Americans. It might be due in part to the very fact you've noted, that the self-aware intellectual too often assumes he is the mental giant of the group and becomes, in consequence, a discouraging bore.

Young America leans over backward in a zealous attempt to escape the epithets "bore" and "blue stocking," and in so doing falls somewhat short of being a stimulating vis-a-vis in the social game of conversation.

* * * *

Another factor instrumental in outlawing good talk in America is our rushing machine-age civilization of the present day, with its concomitant regimentation and commercialization of amusements and diversions.

Only a rugged individualist in the field of social competition dare defy the sternly paternalistic social system which lavishly provides him with such ready-made amusements as bridge, the movies, radio, dining, dancing, swimming, motoring, golfing, flying, sailing, cocktailing and arbitrarily demands that he prove his accustomedness to each. To say, "I'd rather just talk," would seem not only startling heresy, fallon the ears of many, but to be able to do it would have required long years' canny resistance of the system.

* * * *

To be able to talk well, one must first know oneself. But it takes solitude and lots of it to get acquainted with that most elusive person. And solitude, alas, is something that most Americans—especially the younger generation—flee as they would a pestilence. They know but little inner resourcefulness. M. H.

All of Poet's Works Reflect His Chivalry

Admiration Also Shown in Personal and Domestic Relations.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

EIGHTY-FIVE years ago tomorrow, Edgar Allan Poe, America's poet of midnight, died in a Baltimore hospital. In his passing, womanhood lost one of its stanchest defenders. Poe never wrote a single line, either in his poetry, or his prose, that, in the slightest degree, disparaged woman. The dream women of his poetic creation were all ethereal creatures almost unearthly in their attributes. And, in his attitude to the women who loved him and whom he loved, he maintained the same chivalrous attitude.

It was a fortunate dispensation of Providence—the alleviating circumstance in his life—that Poe had woven the golden names of faithful women into the strange mosaic of his destiny. This ministry of women to him was begun by the self-sacrificing Elizabeth Arnold Poe, his mother, and ended with the equally faithful aunt and mother-in-law, Maria Clemm.

The women in his life shine out—like suddenly seen stars—through the darkness of his drear skies. A woman was to be his guardian angel ever, from the cradle to the grave. And well did he repay womankind for its care of him. Worship of woman, adoration of her beauty, belief in her purity and loftiness of soul distinguished not only his immortal writings, but were evident in all his personal and domestic relations as well.

Mrs. Sargent's Tribute.

Mrs. Frances Osgood Sargent, one of the women of the Poe Circle—herself an author of no mean renown—wrote beautifully and simply of the great poet's character: "To a sensitive and delicately nurtured woman there was a peculiar charm in the chivalric, graceful and almost tender reverence with which Poe always approached all women who won his respect. I think no one could know him—no one has known him personally—certainly no woman, without feeling a deep interest in him."

And a master biographer of the poet summed it all into a single paragraph: "Women are the most eager and impassioned defenders of his bedraggled memory; women were the idol and the guardian angels of his household; women are the themes of his most exquisite poems; women have erected in Baltimore the most costly monument to his memory."

There is a fine touch of poetic justice in the fact that there rests with him in that quiet graveyard of Westminster Church, in the heart of busy Baltimore, Virginia Clemm, his child wife—his Annabel Lee—and Maria Clemm, his aunt and more than mother.

The memory of his own mother was never more than a beautiful dream to him. She died when he was but three years old. But, when in December, 1811, he was lifted up, for the last time, to gaze on her placid face her awesome beauty was so imprinted on his childish brain that there and then was born his innate belief that the "most exquisite theme in poesy is a beautiful woman in death."

Homage Paid in Poem.

To that dream mother, Elizabeth Arnold Poe, and to Maria Clemm he wrote the well-nigh perfect poem, "To My Mother." It follows:

To My Mother.

Because I feel that, in the heavens above,
The angels, whispering to one another,
Can find, among their burning terms of love,
None so devotional as that of "mother,"
Therefore by that dear name I long have called you
You who are more than mother unto me,
And fill my heart of hearts, where Death installed you,
In setting my Virginia's spirit free.
My mother—my own mother, who died early,
Was but the mother of myself; but you
Are mother to the one I love so dearly,
And thus are dearer than the mother I knew
By that infinity with which my wife
Was dearer to my soul than its soul-life.

Again and again, in the course of his writings, Poe lay wreaths of appreciation at the shrine of womankind. What nobler words have been written of women than these? "It is the soul-elevating idea that no man can consider himself entitled to complain of Fate while, in his adversity, he still retains the unwavering love of woman." It was in the very depths of desolation that he paused to pen those lines. Again, in the same essay, "The Poetic Principle," he included this apostrophe:

"He feels it (true poetry) in the beauty of woman, in the grace of her step, in the luster of her eye, in the melody of her voice, in her soft laughter, in her sigh, in the harmony of the rustling of her robes. He deeply feels it in her winning endearments, in her burning enthusiasms and her gentle charities, in her meek and devotional utterances, but above all—ah—far above all—he kneels to it, he worships it in the faith, in the purity, in the strength, in the altogether divine majesty of her love."

Noble Women All.

These were the womanly qualities he sought to portray in his dream women, the creation of his brain but made immortal through his own literary immortality. In panorama they pass before us—Annabel Lee, Lenore, Ligeia, Eulalie, Helen and Ulalume and others of that iridescent company of fair maidens that he wrought into never-dying song. The women of Poe's fancy, as well as of his life, were noble women all—there is no corroding touch of earth to mar their ethereal beauty.

His Annabel Lee was inspired, no doubt, by his child-wife, Virginia Clemm.

This poem is the enduring memorial Poe raised to Virginia Clemm Poe. Every word of it is a tear drop for his beautiful, dead wife. As somebody has said: "Merely to have inspired 'Annabel Lee' is glory enough for any woman and will insure her immortality."

Another woman truly loved by Edgar Allan Poe, after the death of Virginia, was Helen Whitman, the New England poet. Their love story has seldom been equaled in the history of literature. All the pent-up romance of his nature was bestowed on this idyl of his dreams. She, swept off her feet by the ardor of his courtship and by the wild frenzy of his wooing, never forgot him and worshiped his memory to the end of her life.

His love letters to her were filled with the fancy of their divine kinship of soul, letters that breathe all the passion of the "Sonnets from the Portuguese."

Boyish Heart Enthralled.

Nor should be forgotten in a recital of the women, real and fancied, who influenced the career of Poe, that gentle Virginia lady, Jane Stith Stanard, of Richmond, whose loveliness enthralled his boyish heart. While scarcely in his teens this woman, the mother of a school mate, awoke the worship of feminine beauty in his heart. She was the first conscious vision Poe had had of a beautiful woman. There and then the boy of high dreams became a poet, who was to be rocked by the billows of fortune, was to be the toy of fate and a victim of desperation and disappointment, but a true, sweet singer still. Poe renamed Mrs. Stanard "Helen," meaning "light of my soul," because he disliked her baptismal appellation of "Jane."

The world owes Jane Stith Stanard much because she inspired Poe's master short poem:

To Helen.

Helen, thy beauty is to me
Like those Nicean barks of yore,
That gently, o'er a perfumed sea,
The weary, wayworn wanderer bore
To his own native shore.
On desperate seas long wont to roam,
Thy hyacinth hair, thy classic face,
Thy Naiad airs have brought me home
To the glory that was Greece
And the grandeur that was Rome.
Lo! in yon brilliant window niche
How statue-like I see thee stand,
The agate lamp within thy hand.
Ah, Psyche, from the regions which Are Holy Land.

Georgia Women Seek Jury Duty

Party Leader, Back From Tour, Discloses Drive Plans.

WHEN the Georgia Legislature meets in January, organized Democratic women will be on the ground as lobbyists demanding, among other social legislation, that women be allowed to serve as jurors. To date, women of Georgia have been denied this citizenship privilege.

With one of their sex serving in the Legislature, women of Georgia are alert to political values, and eager to try their hands at active lawmaking, according to Mrs. James H. Wolfe, women's director of the Democratic National Committee, who returned yesterday from a speaking tour through Georgia and South Carolina.

Old age pensions, improved juvenile court procedure, aid for dependent mothers and children and other potential legislation were indorsed in resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Federation of Georgia Democratic Women's Clubs held at Macon October 3. Mrs. J. A. Rollison, of Waycross, presided.

As main speaker at the Mecon meeting as well as at a similar meeting called at Columbia, S. C., Mrs. Wolfe discussed the subject of social insurance, indorsed by President Roosevelt. She also attended conferences and assisted the women's groups in getting their educational programs outlined for final adoption. The strongly advocated Democratic National committee's reporter plan was enthusiastically embraced at both State meetings.

English Women Well Satisfied With Their Lot

Most Objectives Gained, Entry in Diplomatic Service Now Sought.

(This is the fifth of a series of six daily articles in which foreign bureaus of the Associated Press describe the status of feminism in many lands.)

LONDON (AP).—Feminism in England has shoved the ball across the goal line.

The campaign for women's rights is a movement which has achieved most of its objectives. So feminism, as an issue stirring a crusading zeal in women, is petering out.

A mop-up squad of alert women is still active ironing out some slight inequalities. An effort is being made to win for women the right to enter Great Britain's diplomatic service. On another front women are campaigning for abolition of the present law under which English women who marry foreigners lose their British nationality.

Lords Retain Tradition.

Women may, and do, sit in the House of Commons. One woman has served in the cabinet. The House of Lords still sticks to the ancient tradition of being a man's institution. But apparently women are satisfied to allow the House of Lords to cling to its hoary tradition.

The average British woman is well satisfied with her lot, politically and socially. To make triumph for the sex complete, the so-called "Six Point Group," founded by Lady Rhondda, carries on for the attainment of equality politically, occupationally, socially, morally, economically and legally.

The days of the window-breaking crusades of the late Emmeline Pankhurst are only memories. Her daughter, Christabel, has turned her attention to religious affairs. Sylvia, another daughter, for a time was a thoroughgoing Communist, and now is an active anti-Fascist.

New Era for Spanish Women.

Madrid (AP).—The advent of the second republic three years ago opened a new era for Spanish women. Today women sit in Congress, and a few have even become bullfighters.

Spanish women have won the vote, and their independent use of it is credited with being the chief reason for decisive victories of the conservatives last November.

Divorce has been legalized. Modern Spanish laws strike less severely at women whose children are born out of wedlock. Spanish women are showing an aptitude for the professions.

There is a new personal freedom for women, and the strict chaperonage, which formerly was essential to a Spanish girl's appearance at social functions is vanishing.

French Women's Lot Improved.

Paris (AP). — Since the war wrenched women away from the hearthsides 20 years ago French women have bettered their lot greatly.

Economically and professionally they have made great strides. Socially their lot is happier. Sartorially they continue to dress as they please, and they take orders from no one except the Rue De La Paix.

Politically they have not advanced a step—partly because of their own indifference.

French women do not vote, and great numbers of them do not care to. But a drive for women's suffrage has gained momentum the past few years and there is a general impression that it is "bound to come."

Buying Souvenirs, Autographs Held Big Waste of Time

The girl who spends her time collecting autographs or buying souvenirs is wasting her precious moments, in the opinion of Miss Ruth Nichols, aviator, who recently spoke at the Women's Exposition of Arts and Industries in New York.

"Autograph hunting is a thorough waste of time," she said. "All it does is inflate the ego of the person who collects the signature.

"Souvenir hunting is apt to run into petty pilfering. It is a racket, becoming more and more commercialized and puts people into the nasty frame of mind, which says, 'I've got something you can't get.'"

Tavern Motif Is Carried Out In Tea House

Delicious Viand Served in Real Southern Style.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT IS similar to stepping across the threshold into another century to enter a nearby little tea room.

There you are, only two blocks from Connecticut avenue, close to the shopping center and then presto, down a few steps, through a stone archway and you're in the England of four or five hundred years ago. Low beams, a large fireplace with an ancient tea kettle sizzling in front of it, tavern tables with checked mats, heavy beaten brass ship lanterns, oak benches along the wall—all these combine to give the place the atmosphere of an old English tavern. Almost before you know it you'll be looking around for merry old John Falstaff to come blustering in or listening for the ballads of good Prince Hal.

To make up for the absence of a boar's head or a side of roasted deer you may have your pick of delicious viands cooked Southern style. In this instance Southern style is right, for here is a Southern cook who prepares dishes in the best tradition of the Southern cuisine.

The prices are fixed to meet budgets of any size. You may have a luncheon and a delicious one, for as little as 35 cents or as high as 50 cents. If you choose the smaller one you might have roast pork with apples, a vegetable and either salad or dessert. This is just an example. The menu is changed every day. For 50 cents there's a cocktail or soup, a choice of meats, two vegetables, a salad, desssert, and beverage. In other words, a regular dinner.

If you have dinner here, you may pay 50, 60 or 75 cents and eat your fill of a number of tempting things. Whatever you choose, it will be served well and prepared beautifully.

The breads are home-made and served piping hot from the oven. You may think your appetite has left you, but when you taste those muffins—ummmm!

This is a lovely place to keep in mind for treating those out-of-town guests.

Bargains in Coats.

Those who want to save $10 should take advantage of the coat sale going full blast in a downtown store.

Dozens of models, all this year's style, were bought specially to sell at this amazingly low price—$26.75. At any other time they'd be close to $40.

And if you think there isn't variety, go down and have a look. Some are black, others brown, and there are some greens and wines. As for fur—there's everything from fox to caracul. There are coats with trimmings, fur and otherwise, also coats treated plainly.

Whatever your needs call for, or taste demands, it's a safe bet you'll find it here today.

Delicious Apple Pies.

There are men who can resist blondes, other brunettes, and a few who can resist redheads, but what man can resist an apple pie? When they are knee high to ducks their mothers cater to them this way. When they're a little older their sweethearts, and finally their wives do the same. As for the poor bachelors, they have to find a place where they can buy apple pies all for themselves.

If they stop by a certain small pastry shop they need go no further. Here are such pies, crisp and brown filled to brimming over with slices of fresh tart apples. And the price—only 30 cents.

Wives, mothers, and sweethearts might take the hint, for it's easier to buy than to bake, and these pies have that home-made taste.

Sale of Chocolates.

It's a day of chocolates, to judge from the tasty morsels displayed in a downtown store. And such chocolates! At such prices!

Ordinarily they sell for 50 and 60 cents a pound. Today they're 39 cents! There are buttercreams, both vanilla and chocolate, peanut clusters, chocolate-covered dates and ginger, butterscotch-covered nuts, and those melt-in-your mouth peanut butter balls! All in all there are 20 kinds and they're on sale today!

Aristocrat of Desserts.

White fudge cake looks white and fluffy enough to inspire a poet to a rhyme. A taste of it, however, is apt to result in a sonnet! It's that good. Just whose recipe it is or who makes it is a secret. But it's sold in a downtown bake shop, which has built up an enviable reputation on its cakes alone.

Foremost among the specialties is this white fudge, excellent tea time dish, and an aristocrat of desserts!

Orange Layer Cake.

Another shop has an orange layer cake, two-layer size which is selling for 35 cents. It's a yellow batter cake with frosting made from the juice and grated rind of oranges. Served with orange ice it makes an excellent dessert.

'Sew-Simple' Dress Possesses Lot Of Style, Though Easy to Make

A LOT OF STYLE is packed into this dress, one of a group of designs called "Sew-Simple" because they are unusually easy to make.

To make a skirt that will hang and fit beautifully, there are seams at the center front and back. The deep pointed yoke, a becoming and smart feature, fastens at the back with buttons and loops.

A lightweight woolen is suggested for the dress, and contrasting grosgrain ribbon for the belt and the bows which trim the yoke. The pattern is designed in sizes 14 to 42. Size 18 (36) requires 2¼ yards of 54-inch material for the frock; 2½ yards of 1½-inch ribbon for the belt and bows.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Pyelitis.

BAFFLING cases are often presented by the many vagaries of illness in children. A seemingly well child may suddenly complain of feeling sick. Within a short time he may have a distinct chill followed by a high temperature. There may be no sign of pneumonia, no skin eruption, no enlarged glands—in fact, no characteristic symptom of disease other than a high temperature. On examining the urine a profusion of pus cells may be seen. This is the key to the nature of the malady.

The urinary tract (kidneys, ureter, and bladder) is not immune from infection. On the contrary, and particularly in children, pus in the urine is frequently found. Infections of this nature are largely confined to the very early period of life—from about the third or fourth month until the child approaches the age of three years. More than three-fourths of the infections occur in girls. This is no doubt influenced by the very short canal (urethra) that leads from the bladder to the exterior of the body. When the infection occurs in the kidney itself it is called pyelitis.

Occasionally the infection reaches the kidney from the lower portion of the urinary tract and is then said to be an ascending infection. Sometimes it reaches the kidney via the blood. It has also been shown that, in cases of gastrointestial disorders, colon bacilli from the intestinal tract may be found along the urinary passages.

Regardless of just how bacteria reach this important area, in any illness attended with high fever, chills, marked pallor, and restlessness, infection of the kidney should be investigated. Sometimes the onset is quite severe and there may be convulsions and great prostration. Occasionally the symptoms simulate a disease of the intestinal tract. The urine is usually diminished in quanity and careful microscopic examination may be necessary to determine the presence of pus. A few pus cells in the urine, associated with a fever, rarely mean pyelitis, but when pus cells appear in appreciable quantities, or are massed together, pyelitis may be diagnosed.

The treatment is, first, rest in bed. The patient should be given large quantities of fluid by mouth, preferably water. The physician will know the proper urinary antiseptic to use and several drugs that can be administered will liberate an antiseptic substance in the urine.

The condition as a rule yields to prompt treatment, although that may prove stubborn. An extensive search must be made for the source of the infection. Certain types of the disease prove resistant to treatment and continue intermittently for months, until finally a focus of infection is found and removed.

Early attention usually means avoidance of damage to the kidney, and hence the saving of kidney tissue. If neglected the infection may injure the kidney itself.

Child Chats

Repetitious Use of Word "Hurry" Annoying to Children.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

"HURRY UP, Sally, and finish your oatmeal so Mother can get at the breakfast dishes."

"Junior, please hurry and get those shoes laced or you'll be late for kindergarten."

"Hurry and get the book, Judy, if you want me to read you a story before dinner."

Time means nothing to children; consequently they annoy us by constantly lagging and dawdling. But by the same token, we must annoy them by urging them to hurry. Modern life is geared to such speed that hurrying becomes a necessity for most adults. As a result, I believe, urging children to hurry becomes a habit to which we resort unthinkingly.

Check on yourself some day, counting the number of times you say "Hurry" to anyone in the family, particularly the younger children. Then stop to think how many times it was really necessary. Cut down the "Hurries" and see if you and the children are not noticeably less harassed as a result.

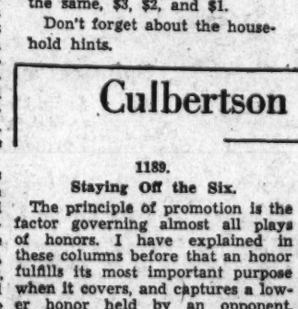
Staying Off the Six.

The principle of promotion is the factor governing almost all plays of honors. I have explained in these columns before that an honor fulfills its most important purpose when it covers, and captures a lower honor held by an opponent. This is the direct duty of honors; but they have a further somewhat indirect duty in that they must escape being captured themselves, and protect honors in partner's hand from being captured.

In the following deal it is correct to refuse to play an honor, although this refusal involves failure to cover so insignificant a card as a six spot. East, by saving his Jack of diamonds, protects his partner's King from capture and retains the opportunity to have the Jack itself promoted to winning rank.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♡	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♡(1)	Pass	3NT(2)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—With better than a minimum hand North must rebid.
2—Having heard that North is able to rebid, South is sure that a game is likely. He can not risk bidding less than three notrump, since if North's hand were weaker he might pass two notrump.

West chose the diamond three for his opening lead; the choice is close between diamonds and clubs, but ordinarily the club would be a slightly better opening. The diamond six was played from Dummy and East made the play which was eventually to save the game—he played a low diamond instead of putting up his Jack.

It is obvious that if East played the Jack South would capture it with the Queen and West's King could be finessed. This would give South three tricks in diamonds. But while East holds the Jack, South can not capture West's King, and his maximum in diamonds is two tricks.

While the play seems somewhat unnatural, it is not by any means a difficult one for East to make.

The only holding West could have which would make East's failure to play the diamond Jack result in the direct loss of a trick would be diamond K Q xx. This would make South's holding in diamonds ten-spot high, which seems most unlikely in view of the notrump bid. An eventual winning trick would be sacrificed if South held the King of diamonds and West the Q 10. But in any case in which West held the King and South the Queen East's play would cost nothing and might gain a trick.

South won the first trick with the diamond seven, and tried to establish the heart suit. Since East held two stoppers, South could not establish nine tricks. After taking three hearts, two spades, two diamonds and a club his resources were exhausted and he was forced to allow East and West to win the last tricks. If East had not held on to his Jack of diamonds, South's ninth trick would easily have been made by the diamond finesse for West's King.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Sam Cresson, living in the London suburb of Sandyways, committed suicide; shortly afterwards, the lifeless body of Sir Julian Bott, noted financier, was found in the same locality. Under suspicion is Anthony Sarson, because he was away from home that night and refused to divulge any information except that he had been searching for the owner of a mysterious car he saw parked in the neighborhood, fell and hit his head, knocking him unconscious. Actually, he had been felled by a blow outside the cottage of Mme. de Sayal, taken in and ministered to by this strange woman; she, however, pledged him to secrecy. Timothy Sarson, Anthony's father, visits his banker, Huitt, and complains of an inaccuracy in his account; while Huitt leaves the office to investigate, Sarson picks up a photograph laying face down on the desk; he is strangely excited. Whose picture was it?

WHEN you have quite satisfied your curiosity, Mr. Sarson, perhaps you would not mind replacing that picture."

Mr. Timothy Sarson did as he was bidden and collapsed into his chair with the feeling that he had made an utter fool of himself. The bank manager continued his quiet progress toward his accustomed place. He took up the photograph and laid it once more face downward upon his blotter, replaced the paperweight and consulted a slip of paper which he was carrying.

"The figures which were handed to you were entirely erroneous, Mr. Sarson," Huitt announced. "Your balance three minutes ago was £29,472,13 shillings and 4 pence, subject to a few days' interest which at the moment we are not able to determine, owing to uncertainty as regards the bank rate."

"Thank you very much," his client mumbled.

"My assistant cashier," the bank manager continued, "begged me to present to you his most abject apologies for the figures he gave to Mr. Plumer. You and I are not subject to these human weaknesses," Huitt went on, with something that was very much like the suggestion of a sneer in his tone, "but as an excuse, if it can be accepted as an excuse, the man explained that he has been sitting up all night with his wife, who is suffering from one of the usual feminine ailments, and he confused you for one moment with a Mr. Harwood, a builder and contractor, who is not unlike you in person.

"The figures he handed you were Mr. Harwood's. I am entirely in your hands in this matter, Mr. Sarson. If you consider that an error, which was quite inexcusable and which may have caused you a few minutes' anxiety, can be expiated only by dismissal, my clerk shall receive a month's notice today. If, on the other hand, you are content to accept his explanation of the unfortunate incident——"

Passionate Plea.

"For heaven's sake, don't go on like that, man!" Sarson broke in, with a note of unusual and unexpected passion in his tone. "God help me, why should I want the young fellow to get the sack—especially if he is in trouble at home? A perfectly natural mistake, Huitt. I don't care a bit. I accept the young man's apologies."

"You are very kind, and I am sure he will be most grateful," Mr. Huitt said. "He is, as a matter of fact, an employe, whom we think well of. You too, Sarson," his friend went on, looking at him keenly through those oval-shaped spectacles, "are in what might be called trouble at home. You are, without a doubt, unnerved. Nevertheless, I am curious. Do you mind telling me exactly what induced you to examine a private belonging of my own lying in security upon my desk?"

"Oh, for heaven's sake, don't be so formal!" Timothy Sarson, who was at most times the acme of formality himself, burst out. "Can't you understand? I scarcely know what I am doing. I walked round this room while you were outside, like a caged tiger. I glared at the clocks, I looked at your prints, I admired your neatness, I drank in the atmosphere of this severe, orthodox spider's parlor and then I saw that photograph. I could not think what in hell you were doing with a photograph. I looked at it again, and the next thing I knew I was holding it up and you came in. Now, let's deal with the matter from a different point if view."

Frantic Words.

"Let us deal with the matter from a different point of view," Huitt repeated with crisp exactitude. "Are you inviting me to a conference upon my belongings?"

"If you don't want me to make a scene and smash all your beautiful furniture, throw your neatly arranged baskets around the place and end in a lunatic asylum," Timothy Sarson almost shouted, "talk to me as man to man. That's the photograph of the woman who probably holds my son's life in her hands," he went on, pointing toward it with shaking forefinger. "What the hell are you doing with it? Have you any influence over her? Do you know anything about her? Just remember we have been neighbors and in a way friends for a great many years, and it is my only son whom they are threatening with jail and perhaps worse—because of that woman! It is she who knows how to put an end to this ridiculous story. If you are on such terms with her secretly as to possess her photograph, for heaven's sake, talk to me like a human being and drop that bank manager's, copybook, minced-up-words attitude!"

Explanation Given.

"Sarson," the bank manager said, "believe me, I sympathize with you."

"You don't look as though you did," Sarson growled. "You don't act as though you did."

"You are utterly overwrought," the other continued. "I forgive your having tampered with my belongings. Think no more about it. This photograph has been sent to me because, during the last week, Madame de Sayal has applied to the headquarters of my bank, requesting them to transfer her balances from various continental centers so that she may deal with them here. She mentioned that this would be the most convenient branch of the bank for her to visit. Formalities," Mr. Huitt went on, without a moment's pause, "with regard to foreign clients require that we should possess two photographs for occasional comparison with their passports. This is one of the two sent me from headquarters."

Timothy Sarson had the air of a man whose little burst of suspicion was being cleanly cut away by the scissors of common sense. The bank manager's freely proffered explanation was utterly convincing.

Incident Forgotten.

"I'm sorry, Huitt," he apologized. "That's all right, of course. I will only pray you to remember that I have been asking myself fiercely, ever since I left my boy, what sort of a woman this might be. Whether she would play the game and tell the truth, if it is necessary, or play the game and tell a lie to save a boy's life, if it had to be. I'm sorry. As to why I looked at the damn' thing at all, I have no explanation. I felt just as much like taking all those tidy letters out of their baskets and tearing them to pieces. I had to do something."

"We will forget the whole incident, Sarson," the bank manager said gently. "Your mind is now at rest about your bank balance?"

"Absolutely."

"Then, take my advice. Now I am hazarding a guess. You have not been to your office this morning?"

"No," Sarson confessed. "I have just come back from home. The car is outside."

"Then, take my advice," Mr. Huitt repeated. "Go down to your headquarters, deal with the day's affairs, keep your mind off those other problems. No good your having a nervous breakdown, you know. You will want to help your boy, if the trouble becomes serious. Very well, you must keep control of yourself. Go down to the office, look through your orders and your letters and deal with them properly. You will find something there to occupy yourself with, I am sure. When you have finished, send your automobile home and meet us in the Club Car. Face every one of us as soon as possible. Every day that you hesitate will make it more difficult. When the time comes for drawing your money out to take up these bills of lading, leave the matter in my hands. I will do everything for you."

Friendly Impulse.

For the first time in his life, Mr. Timothy Sarson felt an impulse of real friendliness toward his aloof neighbor. He leaned over and gripped the small, bony fingers.

"I thank you from the bottom of my heart, Huitt," he said.

"You are a sensible fellow," Huitt said, touching the bell.

Mr. Timothy Sarson bustled off. He made a great point of waving his hand in friendly fashion to the young man who had mutilated his bank account, and when he stepped into the car, he gave the address to his chauffeur almost crisply.

Mr. Huitt, on the other hand, did not at once summon anyone of the clients who were waiting to see him. His finger went out toward the bell, but came back again.

Envelope Sealed.

Once more he removed the paperweight from the photograph. Not a line of his face became softened as he looked at it. It was impossible to tell whether he was an investigator seeking for some technical fault in the likeness of that beautiful woman who smiled at him so subtly, or whether there was any sentiment in his head or heart behind that stealthy, intense regard. He laid it down finally without having permitted himself even the glimmerings of a smile, searched amongst his covered stationery rack until he found an envelope large enough, and taking some sealing wax from its place, he covered the envelope flap and impressed upon the hissing mixture the seal of the bank. Then he crossed the room, opened a small personal safe which stood by the side of the official one, and deposited the envelope. He changed the combination with great care, then returned to his study and touched the bell.

"I will deal now with anyone who is waiting," he announced to the clerk. "Let them come in order of arrival, please."

Mr. James Huitt—reserved, polished, an accurate study of automatic life—dealt with the further business of the day.

CALIFORNIA'S RED EARTHQUAKE

CALIFORNIA has seen many earthquakes . . . but the Golden State is still trembling from the shock of the political upheaval which thrust Upton Sinclair, ardent ex-Socialist, into the nomination for the Governorship. Not only Californians, but thinking persons throughout the United States, are watching with anxiety the approaching election on November 6.

Sinclair has been branded by his foes as an unpractical dreamer and a visionary. His plans promise Utopia in the minds of many . . . yet they are so drastic and radical that if they prove impossible of realization they may well wreck the State's finances before they are fairly under way. Meanwhile, the enormous bond issue he proposes for unemployment relief . . . the high income taxes he plans to levy to create pensions for widows and orphans . . . and a variety of other measures designed to make life easier for the poor and more difficult for the rich . . . all are having the immediate effect of causing a flight of capital in anticipation of his possible election. But if these plans work, what then? Will it mean new and easier living conditions for all Americans?

The background of this bitter campaign . . . and a searching analysis of the man behind it . . . are discussed by Robert Talley in tomorrow's Special Articles Section.

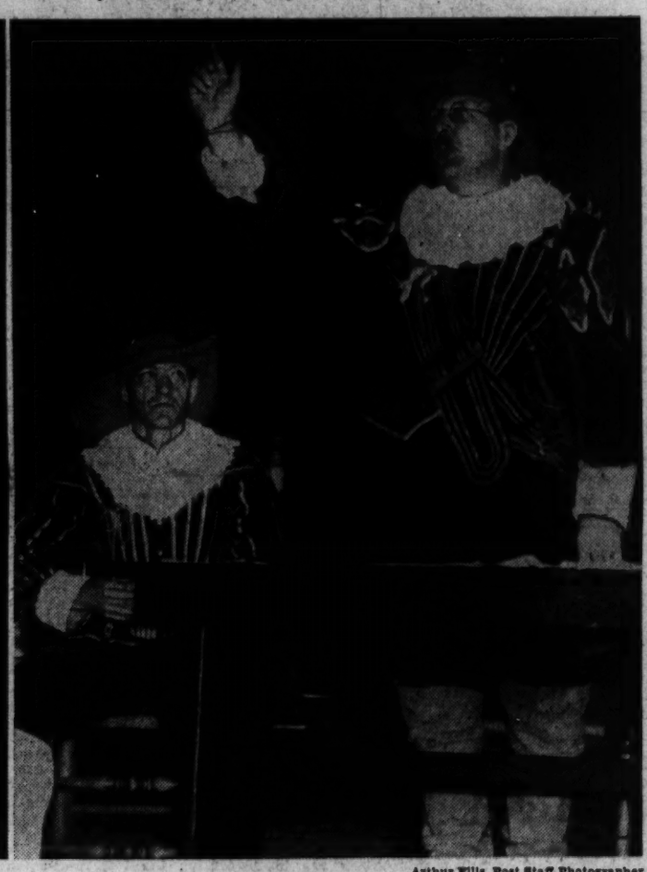
'Soul of Maryland' Is Depicted in Tercentenary Pageant by Cast of 3,000

Pages of Maryland's history last night were turned backword 300 years at Baltimore, when 3,000 Marylanders presented a pageant, "The Soul of Maryland," depicting the growth of the State. The pageant was part of the Maryland Tercentenary program, and was witnessed by many thousands. Each of the State's counties was represented in the pageant with a duchess, accompanied by maids and pages. Among those in the pageant were: Left, Mrs. George W. Young, duchess of Montgomery County, with her pages, left to right, Roger Kan and Ann Young. Center, Lady Baltimore, Miss Octavia Chatard, descendant of a French family which settled in Baltimore 300 years ago, who occupied a place of eminence in the pageant surrounded by her courtiers, left to right, David Ridgely and Randall Berine. Mrs. A. H. Onderdonk, duchess of Washington County, attended by a large court, rode upon a carriage borne by her courtiers.



Prominent Marylanders participated in the feature portion of the pageant. Left, Col. John Philip Hill, portraying Lord Calvert, first Governor of Maryland, chats with Mrs. Alexander Rutherford, the Queen of England. Center, two little colonists, left to right, Caroline and Catherine Slaysman, of Baltimore, talk over roles between pageant scenes. William E. Severe, of Baltimore, who played the part of Lord Baltimore, carried one of the main parts of the pageant, which will be repeated tonight.

6,000 to Make Pilgrimage to I. O. O. F. Home

Four States and District to Be Represented at Fete Tomorrow.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—Between 6,000 and 7,000 Odd Fellows and Rebekahs from Maryland, the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Virgina and West Virginia, are expected to make the eighth annual pilgrimage to the State I. O. O. F. home here.

Representatives from all the 172 Odd Fellow and 56 Rebekah lodges and 39 encampments in Maryland are expected. The forenoon is set apart for an inspection of the home and the afternoon will be given over to a program. Grand Master Hedley C. Black, Baltimore, and his associate officers of the grand lodge; Minnie L. Bean, Baltimore, president of the Rebekah Assembly, and G. Aubrey German, Baltimore, grand patriarch of the State encampment, are expected among the early arrivals. Many of the lodges will donate supplies and cash.

The afternoon program will be begun with a concert by the Taney Lodge Band, Taneytown, Carroll County, followed by the singing of "America." After the invocation by George Oscar Strohmeyer, grand chaplain, and singing by children of the home, the grand master will be presented by the grand representative and chairman of the board of directors, Charles B. Schone, Baltimore. After an address by the grand master, the address of welcome will be made by the president of the Rebekah Assembly and a selection given by the band.

John Insley, resident of the home, will sing, and then William F. Broening, former Mayor of Baltimore and past grand master of the State body, will be presented as the principal speaker. At the conclusion of the address the grand patriarch will be introduced by William A. Jones, grand secretary. Benediction and band music will conclude the program.

The home, including the administration and other large buildings, was completed in 1925 at a cost, including furniture and equipment, of nearly $500,000. It is maintained by lodges of the order in Maryland. It is situated on a large farm opposite Rose Hill Manor, former home of Thomas Johnson, first Governor of Maryland, and was opened July 26, 1925. About 40 elderly persons and 60 boys and girls are residents.

District Grouping Planned in County

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—The Wicomico Democratic State Central Committee is back of a proposed measure districting the county so that all sections will be represented on the board of county commisioners.

Augustus Toadvine, chairman of the central committee, said yesterday that such a measure will be introduced in the 1935 general assembly. It is understood all Democratic candidates are in sympathy with the measure.

At present there is no restriction on the place of residence of a commissioner. It would be possible for all five members to be from one district. The plan, it is believed, involves grouping of 16 districts to be known as "commission districts" and the high man from each district would be nominated.

Paul Dean Wild But Tames Dismal Tigers in Pinches to Win, 4-1

Columbia-Yale Tussle Heads Eastern Football Program Today

Major Tests Slated in All Sections

Ga. Tech and Vanderbilt Renew Old Rivalry; Harvard Opens.

California, St. Mary's Clash in Outstanding Game on Coast.

NOT in a good many years has there been such an abundance of top flight football games bobbing up so early in the season as dot tomorrow's program on a coast-to-coast battle front, according to the Associated Press.

Fans in every corner of the gridiron map can see at least one game that may have a lot to do with the way sectional and conference championships are settled in November, and in some quarters the customers can take their pick of two, and even three, headline attractions.

Yale vs. Columbia.

The East's high spot will be Yale and Columbia at New Haven. The South has its annual duel between Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt, old and bitter rivals. California and the Gaels of St. Mary's will furnish the fireworks on the Pacific Coast, and Big Ten championship hopes are at stake in the Iowa-Northwestern and Indiana-Ohio State clashes.

Add to this layout the debut of the 1934 Notre Dame model, under Elmer Layden, against Texas and you have an afternoon of football that may not be surpassed by any Saturday offering this season.

Lou Little Gloomy.

While Dr. Lou Little, wrapped in deepest gloom, takes what is left of his victorious Rose Bowl Lions to New Haven to usher in Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond's administration as head coach of the Blue, the other two "Big Three" elevens will be stepping out for the first time, but against less formidable foes.

The Princeton Tigers start their third season under the leadership of Fritz Crisler, against Amherst. Harvard opens with Bates at Cambridge.

Army entertains little Davidson College from North Carolina and the fans are anticipating the sky will be black with passes, with Mackerell, the Davidson ace, and Jack Butler, of Army, doing the flipping.

Kansas State is coming halfway across the country to meet little Manhattan, and Richmond comes out of the South to battle Cornell. The Panthers of Pittsburgh meet West Virginia.

From a point of National interest, the chief rival of the California-St. Mary's bout on the coast is the Southern California - Washington State Conference struggle, although a big gallery likewise is assured when Stanford goes against Oregon State.

Auburn Opposes Tulane.

In the Southeastern Conference, the Auburn Plainsmen oppose Tulane. Other Southeastern elevens play teams from out of the conference.

The two Big Ten title jousts between Iowa-Northwestern and Indiana-Ohio State are only two of a bevy of hard-fought games promised Midwestern fans.

Minnesota's big Gophers are booked against Nebraska, Wisconsin looks for a hard afternoon from Marquette and Rice from the Southwest is primed for Purdue. Michigan opens against Michigan State and they say that Coach Charlie Bachman may have a surprise or so for Harry Kipke & Co.

Villanova Awaits Western Maryland

Teams to Meet for First Time Today.

Villanova, Pa., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—Harry Stuhldreher, Villanova College football coach, is planning on starting the identical line-up against Western Maryland tomorrow that rolled up an impressive 35-0 victory over Ursinus College last week.

Joe Wiesenbaugh, shifty fullback, who was kept out of the Ursinus fray with a broken bone in his right hand, engaged in the workout yesterday and displayed his old form in running back punts and sweeping around the ends for big gains.

The game marks the first meeting between Western Maryland and Villanova. The Terrors, as they are called, are reported to have the greatest team in Harlow's coaching career.

NRA Eagles to Meet Brooklyn Edison Nine

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—NRA Eagles play Brooklyn Edison Co., champions of the Greater Industrial League of New York, in a double-header. The visiting nine has dropped one game this season and won 20.

Lefty Stevens, manager of the NRA nine, and Dick Lanahan will pitch for the Washingtonians when the two teams meet at Baggett's Stadium tomorrow afternoon. The first game gets under way at 1 o'clock.

Fan Seeks Series With a '15 Ticket —In Wrong Park

BALTIMORE, Oct. 5 (AP).—A Baltimorean went to Oriole Park here to see the world series.

He wasn't a baseball fan. He didn't even know what leagues the Tigers and Cardinals were in.

However, a friend gave him a ticket to the classic, and he went to the park to search for seat No. 1915.

At the deserted field he became suspicious. Later inquiry revealed his ticket was issued for an old Federal League game in 1915.

G. U. Defeats Saints by 20 to 0

Saverine and Parcells Star in Attack of Hilltoppers.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

GEORGETOWN opened its season last night with a 20-0 victory over a smaller Mount St. Mary's eleven on the rain-swept gridiron at Griffith Stadium. It was a slow game, almost entirely devoid of thrills.

Both teams played sluggish football, though the visitors were the worst offenders. Mount St. Mary's committed ten fumbles—a new high. Georgetown resorted to passes for all of its scores. The Hoyas found their running game stopped at crucial stages of play by the stout line of their opponents—once being held on the two-yard line for downs.

Joe Saverine and Chubby Parcells, a pair of hard-running backs, led the blue and gray to victory. Tommy Lynch, a native Washingtonian, and Pete Reilly, triple-threat full back, were outstanding for the Emmitsburg eleven.

First Quarter.

Parcella kicked off to Acri, who returned it 15 yards to the 45-yard line. Norris and Reilly tried the line twice before Reilly punted to Parcells on Georgetown's 25-yard line. Georgetown's running attack could not get going in the mud and Parcells kicked back into Mount St. Mary's territory. After another exchange of kicks the Hoyas got possession of the oval at midfield.

Parcells just missed a pass from Saverne which would have brought a touchdown, but a few minutes later the pair successfully completed a pass for the score. Herron's placement for the extra point missed. The period ended with Georgetown in possession of the ball deep in St. Mary's territory.

Georgetown, 6; Mount St. Mary's, 0.

Second Quarter.

Saverne hit the line for no gain and then dropped back for a pass. It was intercepted by Farmer on St. Mary's 12-yard line. Reilly kicked to Parcells at midfield and on the first play Parcells got off a quick kick that was downed by Chappa on the 2-yard line. Reilly kicked back to midfield. The period ended with Georgetown holding the ball on Mount St. Mary's 43-yard line.

Score—Georgetown, 6; Mount St. Mary's, 0.

Third Quarter.

Georgetown kept the mounts strictly on the defensive throughout the period as Joe Saverine, its captain, reeled off the prettiest running of the game. Saverine broke through twice for 15-yard runs on the soggy turf. Parcells kicked over the goal line late in the period. Two bad passes from J. Leahy, St. Mary's center, put the team back on its 7-yard line, where Georgetown took the ball. Gibeau passed to Parcells, who leaped into the air and took the ball between two St. Mary's defensive players, for the second touchdown. Parcells drop-kicked the extra point.

Score—Georgetown, 13; Mount St. Mary's, 0.

Fourth Quarter.

Parcells kicked off to Tommy Lynch, who received the ball on his own 15-yard line and returned it 42 yards to Gorgetown's 43-yard mark. Here the visitors' attack bogged down and Georgetown took the pigskin on downs. They exchanged kicks, Parcells returning one 30 yards to the 35-yard line. Saverine, back in the game after being removed because of an injury, passed to Herron for another touchdown. Meglin place-kicked the point.

Georgetown drove to the visitors' 2-yard line midway in the period, but St. Mary's held for downs and kicked out of danger. Late in the quarter the Mounts unleased a drive that netted two consecutive first downs against Georgetown's second-string line. The visitors reached Georgetown's 40-yard—their most serious threat of the night as the game ended.

Score: Georgetown, 20; St. Mary's, 0.

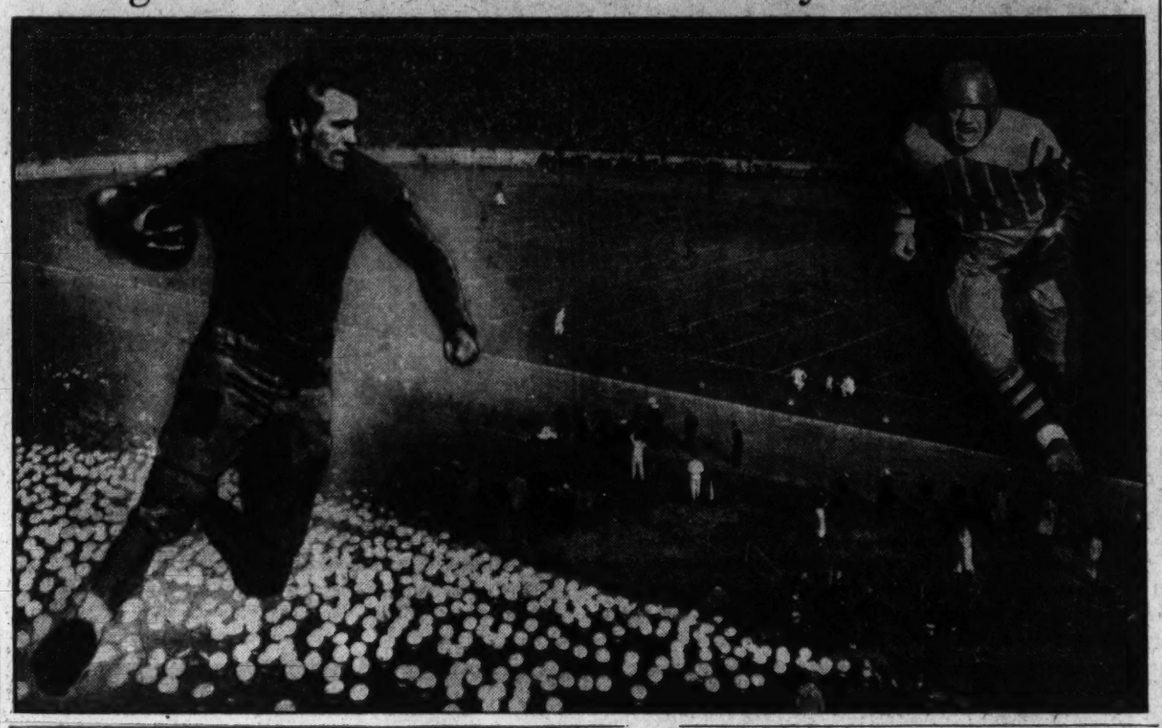
King Football Gathers Momentum Today on All Fronts



20,000 to See Navy-Virginia Grid Battle Here

12th Renewal of Classic to Start at Griffith Stadium at 2.30 P.M.

THE most colorful football drama Washington fans will be privileged to gaze upon this season is to be enacted this afternoon when Navy and the University of Virginia meet in the twelfth renewal of their long-drawn-out series that had its inception back in 1889. The kickoff will be at 2:30 o'clock at Griffith Stadium.

Despite a prediction of unfavorable weather a crowd in the neighborhood of 20,000 is expected to fill the stadium — lured through the turnstiles by the parade of 1,700 midshipmen and a band of 75 pieces and a battle between two fairly evenly matched football teams. The Middies will detrain at the Eckington yards and march to the stadium. They are to parade on the field promptly at 1:45 o'clock.

Plenty of Cheering.

They will put on an unique drill that characterizes all big games away from home, before taking their seats. Aside from the bedlam of cheering and singing, always a big feature, the Middies will give a display of the "colored card stunts," for which they have attained fame.

The Middies will sit in the center field bleachers facing the grandstand. Between halves they will present a special cheering section using colored cards that are fashioned into familiar designs such as the Navy goat, University of Virginia pennants, &c. This is Navy's first visit to Washington since 1931 when it met and was defeated, 6-0, by Maryland at the stadium.

Virginia is out to avenge a 13-7 defeat suffered last year at Annapolis and it will have a host of alumni and well-wishers on deck to cheer it on.

On paper Navy has a slight edge, although both starting elevens will include many names new to the respective line-ups of both schools. New coaches are at the helm of each team, Gus Tebell, of Virginia, and Tom Hamilton, of Navy. Hamilton played on the 1926 Annapolis team—a National championship winner and the greatest in the academy's history.

The game should produce a battle for individual honors between Borries, Navy's bullet-like back, and Tommy Johnson, Virginia's 200-pound ace. Borries is in line for an all-America berth this season, while Johnson was named on the South's honor roll last season.

Neither team was overly impressive in their debuts last week. The future Admirals turned back William and Mary, 20-7, while Virginia nosed out Hampden-Sydney, 8-0, in a hard-fought skirmish.

Play by Play of Third Game

FIRST INNING, TIGERS—White lifted a high fly that Medwick speared with his gloved hand, making a sensational catch just in front of the boxes off left field. Cochrane fanned swinging at a fast curve. Gehringer dropped a Texas league single in left center. Greenberg fouled to Delancey midway down the first base line. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

FIRST INNING, CARDINALS—Martin hit against the screen in right field for a triple. Pepper slid head first into third. Rothrock smashed a long fly to White and Martin scored standing up. There was not even an attempt for a play at the plate. Frisch singled sharply to right. Medwick fanned and Frisch was thrown out trying to steal. Cochrane to Gehringer. One run, two hits, no errors, none left.

SECOND INNING, TIGERS — Goslin bounced a hit over Frisch's head and ran to second as the ball got past Rothrock. It was a single and an error by Rothrock. Rogell flied to Medwick. Goslin holding second. Owen was hit in the back by a pitched ball. Fox popped to Martin back of third base. Bridges fanned on a called third strike. No runs, one hit, one error, two left.

SECOND INNING, CARDINALS—Collins drove a single past Greenberg. Delancey hit against the screen in front of the right field pavilion for two bases. Collins stopped at third. Orsatti was hit in the back by a pitched ball and dropped to the ground. The bases were full as Orsatti went to first. Durocher popped a high foul to Greenberg. Dean hit a long fly to Fox, scoring Collins and sending Delancey to third. Martin lined to White. One run, two hits, no errors, two left.

THIRD INNING, TIGERS—White lined to Rothrock. Cochrane walked, the fourth ball being outside. Gehringer hit to short left center and Medwick barely missed the catch, Cochrane running to third and Gehringer to second, as the Tiger second baseman was credited with a scratch two-bagger. Greenberg fanned swinging at a high, hard one. The Cardinals decided to pass Goslin intentionally and he was walked on four straight balls, filling the bases. Rogell flied out to Orsatti in deep center. No runs, one hit, no errors, three left.

THIRD INNING, CARDINALS—Bridges remained in the box for the Tigers. Rothrock flied to White, who misjudged the ball and barely got back fast enough to grab it over his shoulder in deep center field. Frisch lifted a high foul to Cochrane, who made the catch near the third base coaching box. Medwick singled past Rogell. Collins lifted a short fly to Goslin. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

FOURTH INNING, TIGERS — Owen grounded out, Durocher to Collins. Fox lashed a single past Martin. Bridges walked, the fourth ball being low. White fouled to Delancey near the plate. Cochrane walked, the fourth ball being inside and the bases were full. The bat boy brought a towel out from the dugout for Dean to wipe his perspiring face and hands. Dazzy Vance was warming up in the bull pen. Gehringer bounced to Frisch and was thrown out at first on a close play. The ball took a bad hop and the Cardinal manager's throw was hurried, almost pulling Collins off the bag. No runs, one hit, no errors, three left.

FOURTH INNING, CARDINALS — Delancey fanned, swinging at a low curve. Orsatti walked. Durocher lifted a high fly to Rogell. Dean fanned, swinging at a fast ball. No runs, no hits, no errors, one left.

FIFTH INNING, TIGERS—Greenberg walked. Goslin lifted a short fly to Medwick. Rogell dropped a single in short center and Greenberg ran to third. Owen fanned, swinging at a fast ball that cut the outside corner of the plate. Fox fanned, swinging hard at a fast ball, and the crowd gave Dean an ovation as he stopped the Tigers with men on bases for the fifth successive inning. No runs, one hit, no errors, two left.

FIFTH INNING, CARDINALS—Martin slashed a double against the screen in front of the right-field pavillion. Rothrock dropped a long triple down the left-field line, scoring Martin. The ball rolled to the extreme corner of the field before Goslin caught up with it. Frisch bounced a single over Gehringer's head, scoring Rothrock. The Detroit infield was playing in and Gehringer just failed to stop the ball as he jumped. Bridges was taken out of the box and was replaced by Box Hogsett, southpaw. Medwick grounded to Rogell and the Tigers pulled a double play, Rogell to Gehringer to Greenberg. Collins grounded to Rogell and was safe when Greenberg failed to hold the shortstop's bad throw. It was an error by Rogell. With Delancey up, Collins was thrown out trying to steal, Cochrane to Gehringer. Two runs, three hits, one error, none left.

SIXTH INNING, TIGERS — Hogsett fanned, swinging. White drove a single through the middle of the diamond. Cochrane lined to Rothrock. Gehringer hoisted to Rothrock. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

SEVENTH INNING, TIGERS—Greenberg grounded out, Martin to Collins. Goslin fanned, swinging hard. Rogell popped high to Durocher. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

SEVENTH INNING, CARDINALS—Dean bounced out, Gehringer to Greenberg. Martin walked, the fourth ball being outside. Rothrock grounded sharply to Gehringer and Rogell dropped the throw for a forced play at second as Martin came charging in. The final hands were safe and it was another error for Rogell. Frisch up. Ball one, inside. Martin was thrown out trying to steal third. Rothrock reached second on the play. Frisch grounded to Hogsett and was called out on a close decision at first. No runs, no hits, one error, one left.

EIGHTH INNING, TIGERS—Owen flied to Rothrock in deep right center. Fox hoisted a high one to Rothrock. Hogsett fouled to Martin near the boxes behind third base. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

NINTH INNING, TIGERS—White lined a single over Collins' head. Cochrane popped to Durocher, who made the catch on the grass behind third. Gehringer popped high to Frisch. Young Star Leaves 13 Rivals on Bases; Bridges Pounded Out Frisch Hails Youngster; 'They Ain't Going to Beat Us,' He Says.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5 (AP).—Frankie Frisch, fiery manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, who sang a song of hate 24 hours ago, was singing a love song tonight.

Instead of storming and raging, he professed love for everybody in St. Louis, and Paul Dean in particular, after his Cardinals tramped over the Jittery Tigers. He was immensely proud of the performance of the younger Dean in holding the Tigers in check, although they twice had the bases loaded.

Hanging over the clubhouse door is a big white sign, painted in flaming red letters and bearing the inscription made famous by Blondy Ryan as he came to the rescue of the 1933 Giants. It reads, "They can not beat us."

Praises Younger Dean.

Frisch pointed to it and exclaimed:

"Boy, they ain't going to do it, either."

Then he launched into praise of the gangling Paul Dean.

"He certainly pitched a swell game," Frisch said, "particularly in the pinches when he bore down with the bases loaded. Pepper Martin played typical world series baseball.

"Rothrock, our right fielder, hasn't been giving much attention to this series, but he's playing marvelous ball. He hasn't missed a single inning all season.

Crowd Around Ace.

When the Cardinals reached their dressing room they swarmed around Paul Dean, yelling and slapping him on the back. Pepper Martin was the first to greet him, yelling "nice going, old kid."

Dean set his 6-foot 3-inch frame down on a bench in front of his locker, declaring he never was so tired in his life. He was dripping perspiration and puffing like a race horse.

"They didn't give me much trouble any time," he said. "I was faster the last two innings than I was at any time during the game. I don't hold no ball club cheap and that's the reason I beared down."

Some one wanted to know whether he was nervous pitching his first World Series game in his freshman year in the majors.

Lousiest Curve.

"Me nervous? Not me," he said. "There wasn't nothing to get nervous about. I wasn't right during the first part of the game. I had the lousiest curve today I ever had in my life."

Pepper Martin, Cardinal third baseman, heard that remark and yelled over:

"Boy, but you certainly had a fast one."

Dean continued:

"I guess the reason I wasn't working so good is because I've had too much rest. I ain't pitched a game in six days."

Cochrane Shifts Order for Today; Greenberg Dropped to Sixth.

St. Louis, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—The St. Louis Cardinals tonight were made 1-to-3 favorites to win the World Series baseball championship over the Detroit Tigers by Betting Commissioner Tom Kearney, who rated the Tigers 2 to 1 against. For Saturday's game, the Cards are 3 to 5, the Tigers 6 to 5.

By George Kirksey.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—The World Series capital shifted back to Holdenville, Okla., today when Paul (Daffy) Dean pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-1 triumph over the Detroit Tigers in the third game before a happy home crowd of 34,073, watching their first battle of the series.

Those two remarkable brothers from the Southwest—Dizzy and Daffy—have now pitched the Cardinals to two victories and the outlook tonight is dark and gloomy for the toothless Tigers, with a lone victory.

Six Chances to Score.

The hypnotic spell which Dizzy cast over the Tigers in the opening game passed on to his kid brother today. As soon as the Tigers saw Dean warming up they semed to go into a trance from which they did not arouse themselves until the ninth inning. They had six opportunities to score before they finally got a run in the ninth to escape the stigma of a shut-out.

Dean, nervous and wild at the start, was in one deep, dark hole after another. He had trouble getting the ball over the plate, his fast ball didn't have the old hop on it, and his curve wasn't breaking as the boys down in Holdenville know a Dean curve should break. But Dean didn't need to have much more than a glove and a fighting heart. When the Tigers got on, Daffy got better. He buckled up his cream-colored pants, pulled his cap down close, and "fogged 'em in there"—as the Dean boys say when they throw so fast the opposition can't see.

Thirteen Detroit men were left on bases. Twice the Tigers had the bases filled in the third and fourth innings, but couldn't score. In the first four innings the Tigers had nine men left stranded. A hit anywhere along the line might have changed the entire outcome, but the Tigers couldn't forget that Dean was out there pitching.

Tommy Bridges, the Tigers' second best pitcher, who is credited with having the best curve ball in baseball, never had a chance. The Cardinals started hammering in the first inning and kept pecking away until they drove him from the mound in the fifth.

Elon (Chief) Hogsett, southpaw, who appeared as a relief hurler in the first game, came to Bridges' rescue in the fifth with none out, and kept the Cardinals in check the rest of the route.

It wasn't a thrilling ball game today. The Cardinals fought hard and hustled their way to victory, but

Mrs. Dizzy Rules Purse to Keep Wolf Away

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5 (AP).—It's time you met Pat—the third member of the St. Louis Cardinals' heralded Dean act.

She is the balance wheel between the sublime and the ridiculous. She babys Dizzy, mothers Paul and handles the contracts "because somebody has to know something about it." She is Mrs. Jerome Herman "Dizzy" Dean, nee Patricia Nash, of Gulfport, Miss.

MRS. DEAN.

"I don't know anything about baseball strategy. That's Dizzy's business. But I do know how the money is to be got and what to do with it." Thus Mrs. Dean sums up her contribution to the partnership.

"When one member of the firm is lacking in practical sense it is a good thing the other member has it. That's where I come in.

"A baseball player's life is so short. Three big years. That's the record nine times out of ten. Sometimes only one big year. Sometimes only one big moment. I've heard cheers change to jeers almost in one breath. The higher you go the harder you fall. That's the law of gravity.

"Well, when the crowds start booing Dizzy instead of cheering him I want him to be able to retire gracefully with money in his pocket."

Mrs. Dean's manner belies her financial ability; she laughs at Dizzy's refusal to keep things orderly about the house, at Paul's ability to "just sit and be quiet," and at the women who deluge the brothers with fan mail.

She and Dizzy were married three years ago in Houston, Tex., before either of the brothers reached the big top. They have no children.

At home Dizzy's "wise-cracking" and Paul's silence are not taken with any degree of seriousness. "Windy talk?" asks Pat. "That's just his line. He pulls it at home, too. 'You're a lucky girl to be married to a great guy like me,' he'll say. He doesn't get away with that with me, of course. He's a great teaser and kidder and practical joker, but he does not waste much of that stuff on me."

Mrs. Dean says her plans after the series depend on "how the series goes." The statement lacks the incorrigible optimism of her husband.

"I'd like best to open the little house we bought in Florida and fish and play golf and keep house, but I want Dizzy to take advantage of all these offers he has had, if they still hold good after the series is over.

"You see I'm determined Dizzy shall not end his career on a park bench."

Confident Generals Favored to Defeat Maryland for First Time Since 1927

Terps on Top In Series, 5 to 4

Victory Over Kentucky Gives Big Incentive to W. & L. Team.

By Bill McCormick.
(Post Staff Correspondent)

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 5.—Primed and loaded for Terrapin, the Washington and Lee Generals swung through a light workout today—prepared to bring their score with Maryland for the past decade to a draw in the annual classic tomorrow.

The score now stands 5 to 4, in favor of the mighty machine from Maryland, but if determination and will to win, plus a practically impregnable line carry any weight, it will be 5-all at the conclusion of tomorrow's battle of Wilson Field.

Not since 1927 have the Generals been able to subdue the Old Liners, but never before have their prospects been much brighter. A hammering, startling upset over Kentucky in their inaugural has inspired this year's Generals with confidence and faith in their own ability that will require awe-invoking football as an antidote.

Score 1933 Upset.

Like their fabled namesakes, the Terrapins keep plugging along, paying little heed to advance indications, omens, portents, or psychology. No better evidence of their total disregard for omens, portents, &c., &c., exists than their startling upset over the Washington and Lee team last year.

With everyone but themselves conceding the Generals the game, the Old Liners banged into action in a most amazing manner, amassing an imposing score of 33-to-13 over their favored rivals.

The Maryland squad, 38 strong, detrained here tonight, prepared to match the Generals, man-for-man, in the matter of substitutions. Every man on their regular team, with the exception of three, is a letterman, and many of their second-string players are seasoned veterans.

May Take to Air.

To combat the driving force and power of the Washington and Lee line, the Old Liners generally are expected to take to the air. Their passing game is working as smoothly as the maneuvers of the Army Air Corps, and in Guckeyson they have not only a great pass snagger but a good kicker as well.

The Generals boast two of the biggest tackles in the game in the persons of Owings and Bonino, whose combined tonnage ranges in the neighborhood of 600 pounds. Ellis, an end, is believed to be as good a kicker as Guckeyson.

Bonino at Guard.

Coach Tex Tilson is expected to start the same line used so successfully against Kentucky, with Bonino at guard. Bailey is expected to start at full back, with Capt. Sam Mattox and Wilton Sample, a sophomore, at the half back position. George Glynn, the Generals' capable center, again will take care of the pivot position.

The Old Liners will start a veteran line, but Sachs will be the only experienced man in the starting back field. Sothoron will continue in his new duties as quarter back, which he assumed against St. John's.

Lane Eleven Wins Over Wilson High

Triumphs, 19-0, for 2d Victory of Season.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—Playing on a muddy field, Lane High defeated Wilson High of Staunton here today, 19 to 0, to register its second victory of the season.

The locals made two touchdowns in the first half. The first followed a 30-yard return of a punt by Carl Deane. On the next play, Disque shot a pass to R. Deane across Staunton's goal line. Near the close of the second period Taylor blocked a punt on Staunton's 10-yard line and Capt. Hagood fell on the ball for a touchdown. Near the end of the game Disque broke through tackle and ran 20 yards to score.

Eagles to Hold Banquet At New Hall Oct. 20

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—The Fraternal Order of Eagles are planning a banquet for the baseball team for October 29, at 8 o'clock, in the Eagles new hall on King street.

George Everly, former secretary and treasurer of the Alexandria Athletic Association, is making plans to enter a team to represent this city in the Valley Baseball League next season. Everly is a former Blue Ridge League baseball star, having pitched for the Harrisonburg and Martinsburg nines in the old loop.

Soccer Teams Tie, 0-0.

Frostburg, Md., Oct. 5 (Spl.). Making their first appearance of the season in a Western Maryland Interscholastic Soccer League contest, Coach J. Stanley Hunter's Beal High School soccerites battled the booters of Central High School, Lonaconing, to a scoreless tie here.

Picks for Today's Gridiron Contests in All Sections of Nation

By Herbert W. Barker
(Associated Press Writer).

Stealing a leaf from the recent America's Cup yachting series, football prognosticators hoisted the red flag of protest last night.

"Too tough!" they cried, as they scanned the list of week-end games. But that fact failed to prevent them from foisting their selections upon an unsuspecting public.

Absolutely without guarantee of any sort, here's the way the teams line up so far as this corner can see:

Northwestern-Iowa—Boasting a fine passing attack of their own, the Wildcats' defense against air raids was weak against Marquette last week. Iowa's fleet and skillful back field may give the Hawkeyes the edge.

Yale-Columbia—Columbia was hard hit by graduation, but it's only on the toss of a coin that Yale gets the call here.

Vanderbilt-Georgia Tech—The best offering on the Southern card, with Vanderbilt slightly favored.

Southern California-Washington State—Despite the close call with College of Pacific, this guesser will string along with Southern California until the bitter end.

Tulane-Auburn—A fine Tulane array is the indicated choice here, though Auburn always is tough for the Green Wave.

Notre Dame-Texas—Elmer Layden unveils his first Notre Dame eleven and, barring accidents, snares his first victory.

West Virginia-Pitt—The Mountaineers have licked Duquesne, but it's suicide to bet against Pitt when the Panthers play an Eastern team.

California-St. Mary's—There may be no more fiercely fought engagement than this one. An exceedingly timid ballot for Slip Madigan's Gaels.

Army-Davidson—Another one on the right side of the ledger for Army.

North Carolina-Tennessee—Another possible trouble-maker, but a vote for Tennessee nevertheless.

Minnesota-Nebraska—Subject to change without notice, doubt is hereby expressed that the Cornhuskers can halt that pile-driving Minnesota offense.

Ohio State-Indiana—Out of a hat on this one, and the ballot reads "Ohio State."

Oregon State-Stanford—Death on the one side, destruction on the other, but a vote for Stanford just the same.

Michigan-Michigan State—If Michigan can stop State's passes, the Big Ten champions should win. State was weak defensively against Grinnell last week.

Purdue-Rice—These Southwest Conference invaders should prove tough, but Purdue is the choice.

Wisconsin-Marquette—Marquette gave Northwestern all kinds of trouble and may annoy the Badgers no end. Wisconsin is picked by a hairline margin.

Navy-Virginia—Navy, comfortably.

Cornell-Richmond—Ditto Cornell.

Louisiana State-Southern Methodist—The Baton Rouge Tigers over the Mustangs.

Duke-Clemson—Should be no worries for Duke here.

Washington and Lee-Maryland—The Generals, decisively.

Georgia-Furman—Don't bet against Georgia this season.

South Carolina-Virginia Military—Likewise the Gamecocks of South Carolina.

Virginia Poly-Florida—Probably a close one, with Florida slightly favored.

Texas Christian-Arkansas—Purely a shot in the dark, Texas Christian for its apparently greater scoring power.

Colorado University-Missouri—Colorado tied Kansas last week and seems to have the edge here.

Oklahoma-Centenary—Is this the spot where Centenary's long undefeated record will crack up?

Tulsa-Kansas—A close one in prospect. Tulsa, after much futile deliberation.

Utah-Colorado College—One vote for the Utes.

Utah State-Montana State—Ditto for Utah State.

Manhattan-Kansas State—This one will decide whether Manhattan is as good as Chick Meehan thinks.

Princeton-Amherst—The Tigers' first roar.

Illinois-Washington University—A scheduled warm-up for the Illini.

Cincinnati-Kentucky—If this isn't a tie, then a vote for Kentucky.

Oklahoma A. and M.-Drake—The champion Aggies to win.

Harvard-Bates—In unison, Harvard.

Penn-Ursinus—Penn opens against a warm-up foe.

Fordham-Westminster—So does Fordham.

Colgate-St. Lawrence—And still another.

Rockingham's Meet Ends Today

Whitney Entry Is Favored in 7,500 Test; Laurel Has $2,500 Stake.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP).—Offering three stakes for horses of all ages, Rockingham Park will close the gates on a successful fall meeting tomorrow with the richest program on hte National turf program.

Heading the triple-stake card are the $7,500 General Green Handicap, a one and one-sixteenth miles test for which 14 older horses have been named, and the $5,000 Juvenile Endurance Handicap of one mile with eight overnight entrants. The $2,000 Boston & Maine Handicap, open to all ages, has attracted eight for a five-furlong sprint.

C. V. Whitney appears to hold the strongest hand in the Gov. Green Handicap, having named his fleet 3-year-old filly, High Glee, and the arratic but speedy Mad Frump. The field is studded with speed, however, with Mrs. Jack Howard's Advising Anna, Clarify from hte Corsicana Stable, the Goldstream Stud's Ebony Lady and Marmion and the Wheatley Stable's Fleam well considered. Clarify has been assigned the top weight of 117 pounds, two more than High Glee.

Hal Price Headley's Fraidy Cat and Whitney's Surveyer stand out as the pair to beat in the juvenile race. Their rivals will be Sand Cloud, Happy Helen, Pantoufle, also flying the Whitney silks, Hope Eternal, High Image and Blackbirder.

Two-yead-olds also will hold forth at Laurel, with 14 of the youngsters meeting in the six furlongs of the $2,000 Richard Johnson Stakes. The overnight field includes such good sprinters as E. R. Bradley's Bird Flower, George D. Widener's Go Quick, the Howe Stable's Nautch and Dasher from the Wheatley Stable.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—The Washington-Lee High School, Clarendon, Va., defeated the Handley High School of Winchester here this afternoon on their own field 3-to-0.

Neither team scored in first three periods, however, in closing moments of the fourth quarter the Generals reached the Handley 10-yard line. Simultaneous with the blowing of the final whistle, Carr center for Clarendon snapped the ball to Boswell, half back, who placed a kick between Handley's goal posts winning the game for Washington-Lee.

Beccali Twice Hurt But Wins Two Races

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 5 (U.P.). — The gritty performance of Luigi Beccali, of Milan, Olympic champion, in surviving two painful accidents to win the 1,500-meter run featured a track and field meet between a team of Italian athletes and an American collegiate team at Harvard Stadium today, although the Americans scored a 7-5 victory.

Bullis Loses To Gonzaga

Boyle's End Run and Freak Safety Win, 8-0.

A TOUCHDOWN and a safety in the final period gave Gonzaga High School an 8-to-0 victory over Bullis Prep yesterday on the Gonzaga gridiron.

A Bullis offensive was stopped on the Gonzaga 12-yard line in the first half, and its half back, Rosser, missed an attempt for a field goal.

Gonzaga gained possession of the ball on the Bullis 25-yard line, when a Bullis back fumbled a punt in the third period. Malcolm Leubkert, Gonzaga quarter back, carried the ball on two tackle thrusts to the 3-yard line as the period ended. After no gain, Leubkert sent Jimmy Boyle around right end and the fast-stepping back went for a touchdown. The line plunge for the extra point fell short.

Gonzaga's other two points came on a freak play when Leubkert's punt, late in the fourth quarter, hit the Bullis full back, Child, on the shoulder and bounced into the end zone, where Freddie McCly, Gonzaga left end, fell on the ball for a safety.

Virginia Tech Faces Florida

Switches Back to Veterans for Today's Game.

BLACKEBURG, Va., Oct. 5 (AP).—None too heavy nor yet dismayed, Virginia Tech's Gobblers hoped to convince the Old Dominion's fandom tomorrow that they can atone for the Temple defeat with a victory over Florida.

Dissatisfied with the showing of sophomores in the game at Philadelphia, Coach Henry Redd switched to his veteran talent, gambling considerable weight in the forewall for experience.

Veterans had the call also in the back field, although Foots Dickerson, husky sophomore, was assured of a starting berth. If Duncan Holsclaw, another veteran and a first-class signal caller, is sufficiently recovered from an injury to start the game, Tech chances will be more favorable.

Zuppke's Aid Resigns; Will Enter Business

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 5 (AP). — Milton M. Olander, chief assistant to Coach Bob Zuppke at the University of Illinois for the last nine years, resigned today, effective early next year, to take a position with a Toledo manufacturing concern.

V. M. I. Faces S. C. State Today

Stadium at Columbia to Be Dedicated; 18,000 Crowd Expected.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 5 (Spl.). The Capital City of South Carolina donned its festive raiment tonight in anticipation of the football game at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon between the Gamecocks of the State University and Virginia Military Institute. The contest will mark the opening and dedication of Columbia's new steel and concrete Municipal Stadium, the finest and largest structure of its kind within Palmetto boundaries.

V. M. I.'s Flying Squadron was expected to arrive by train early tomorrow morning. The Birds practiced this afternoon at the scene of the battle, where tomorrow they will launch their fall Southern Conference campaign before an expected capacity crowd of 18,000.

Carolina opened its season last week in an intrastate skirmish with Erskine College, surprising its most ardent supporters with a 25-to-0 victory. At the same time V. M. I. made a gallant stand against Duke's conference champions, but was routed in the second half for a 46-to-0 victory.

Tomorrow's game will afford an opportunity to size up both elevens. The Gamecocks will meet Hunk Anderson's N. C. State team the following Saturday at Raleigh while the Flying Squadron will go to New York to oppose Columbia University, Rose Bowl victor last New Year's day.

Tennessee Is Favored Over North Carolina

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 5 (Spl.). Keyed to a fighting pitch that only the underdog can attain, the Carolina eleven tonight eagerly awaited the morrow's game with Tennessee's Vols.

Both elevens showed form as they ran through their last light drills in Kenan Stadium, with the Vols looking particularly formidable. Although Tennessee remained a favorite, predictions were for another close battle such as always results when Tarheel and Vol clash on the grid. Heavy advance sale this week indicates that a crowd close to 20,000 will turn out.

Miss Van Wie Beats Mrs. Vare and Miss Traung Trims Mrs. Hill to Gain Final

Both Victors By 3 and 2 Scores

Chicagoan Is Near Third Title in Row; Meets for Crown Today.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5 (AP).—Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, poised herself for her third successive National golf championship today when she defeated Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, five times former title holder, 3 and 2, in the semifinal round of the thirty-eighth tournament.

Between her and a place in the golf Hall of Immortals with Beatrix Hoyt, Alexa Stirling Fraser and Mrs. Vare, each of whom has won the title three straight years, is an amazing 20-year-old girl from the Pacific Coast, Dorothy (Dot) Traung.

Defeats Mrs. Hill.

Equaling women's par for 16 holes, Miss Traung stamped out the title aspirations of Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City, by exactly the same score that Miss Van Wie triumphed and with one less stroke.

As far back as American golf disciples can recollect, no golfer playing in the championship for the first time ever has reached the final until buxom "Dot" came along. She makes up for her inexperience with a remarkable calmness and deliberation.

Too Fast a Pace.

Except for three putting lapses and a badly executed trap shot on the seventh hole, Miss Van Wie played at a pace too fast for Mrs. Vare, mother of a 10 weeks old son and only recently returned to the golfing wars.

After winning the second hole Virginia never was behind as she made the turn 2 up and closed out the match on the sixteenth green.

Mrs. Vare began to show the effects of the strenuous week of play on the second nine and although she won the tenth and then took the fifteenth after Virginia was dormie 4, the end was inevitable.

Blow to Loser.

The victory of Miss Traung over the Kansas City woman was a big disappointment to Mrs. Hill, who twice before had got as far as the semifinals only to have her game desert her.

She played sensationally yesterday in her 24-hole triumph over Mrs. Leona Cheney, and when she started the day by making a great explosion shot from a trap and then canning a 4-foot putt for a half in 4s at the first it appeared her clubs still were red hot.

They also halved the second and third holes, but Dorothy then started to town, whanging her drive 50 yards beyond that of Mrs. Hill on the fourth, pitching on 4 feet short and holing the putt for a birdie 3.

Miss Van Wie and Miss Traung play 36 holes for the crown tomorrow.

Art Lasky Loses Fight to Hamas

Minneapolis Giant Killer Puts Up Savage Fight.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—"Handsome Steve" Hamas, battered and bloody, staggered into the heavyweight throne room tonight after winning a smashing, bruising ten-round brawl from Art Lasky, Minnesota farmer, in the show that officially opened the metropolitan indoor boxing season.

Nearly 13,000 fans saw the former gridiron hero and darling of the Park avenue dowagers come back from the verge of a knockout three times to gain the split decision over tall, angular Lasky, despite the latter's advantages of weight, height and reach.

It was probably the most savagely contested heavyweight battle ever staged in the house that Tex Rickard built, and at the end most of the fans were undecided as to the winner, although Steve was decidedly the worse for wear.

The judges disagreed as to the victor, and Referee Billy Cavanaugh awarded the decision to Steve. It is possible that one lone back-hand blow proved Lasky's undoing. He lost the fourth round on a foul because of a wild left back-hand. Without the loss of this session, according to the United Press score sheet, they would have been even in rounds earned with five each.

Prince Georges Soccer Program Rained Out

Opening contests yesterday in the Prince Georges County high school championship boys' soccer and girls' field ball series were postponed because of rain.

Soccer games called off included matches between Hyattsville and Maryland Park at Maryland, Laurel and Mount Rainier at Mount Rainier and Brandywine and Baden at Baden. The same schools were listed for field tilts, with the scene of play reversed.

Announcement was made that the Hyattsville-Maryland Park soccer game will be played Monday at 3:30 o'clock at Maryland Park. The Laurel-Mount Rainier contest will not be played until Tuesday, October 16. No date has been selected for the Baden-Brandywine match. Field ball postponements will be announced later.

Fox Hunt Scheduled.

West Union, W. Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—The Doddridge County Fox Hunters Association will hold its fifth annual field trials and bench show here the week beginning October 22. Dogs will be entered and the bench show held October 22. Derby dogs will be cast the next day and all-age field trials will be run October 24 and 25.

Willard Fails To Don Gloves

Big Jess Refuses to Box When 150 Appear.

Orange, Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—Jess Willard, former heavyweight champion of the world, who was scheduled to box in the main attraction of a program punch here tonight, arrived as scheduled, but did not strip for action.

The big boy from Pottawatomie took one look at the slender crowd of 150 which sparsely inhabited the rain-soaked ten in which he was to have made his first ring appearance since 1923, yodelled a feeble "howdy" to the crowd — then scrammed.

The former wearer of the diadem that now reposes on the brow of Mad Maxie Baer, was en route to Florida, where he will referee wrestling matches this winter. The Orange boxing enterprise had been planned as a pleasantly profitable interlude, which it might have proven had not Jupe Pluvius wept without restraint on the proceedings.

Among those disappointed was Jock Whitney, the prominent sportsman, who came with a party of friends all the way from Llangollen to see the aged clouter from Kansas perform. The Whitney party left the ringside early, when they learned that jarring Jess was not to appear.

G. W.-Denver Tied, 0-0, At Half

Colonials Penalized After Drive Deep Into Foes' Territory.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 5 (AP).—George Washington U. and Denver U. were deadlocked at 0-0 at the end of the first half of their night game here.

Coach Pixlee started "shock troops" in the Washington line-up and Breazel, a substitute back, fumbled the opening kickoff on his own 26, Quinn, of Denver, recovering. D. U. couldn't gain, however, and the Colonials took the ball on downs. When the first-string Colonials took the field Leemans ran the ball from his own 4 to his 32. With Brewer he made a first down and then Leemans ran to D. U.'s 27, but the visitors were penalized. It was the Colonials' ball on their own 19 as the period ended.

Leemans punted to Devereaux, who fumbled but recovered. A short kick by Young put the oval on the visitors' 45-yard mark, but shortly afterward Brewer fumbled and McGuire recovered for Denver on his 46. Intercepting a pass, the Colonials marched to Denver's 6-yard line and reached the 1-yard stripe via a penalty on the Pioneers for piling. There, however, Brewer again fumbled, McGuire recovered. Young punted out of danger.

Toronto Club Downs Columbus by 6 to 4

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Toronto Leafs, champions of the International League, eked out a 6-4 victory tonight over Columbus, American Association title-holders, to edge back into the running for claims to the Minor League crown. Columbus has won three games and tonight's victory gave the Leafs two wins in the Little World Series. Five victories take the title.

Grays Meet Colesville.

The Chevy Chase Grays baseball team will meet the Colesville nine in a double-header tomorrow afternoon at Colesville. The first game will start at 1 o'clock. Cocky Medler, no-hit pitcher of the Grays, will hurl against Ray Davidson, mound ace of Colesville.

In a secluded spot of the Saratoga Battlefield, New York, stands a marble monument—a memorial not to a man, but to his left leg.

Although his name nowhere appears on it, the monument was erected to the left leg of Benedict Arnold, American Revolutionary traitor, as a tribute to his one-time heroism at Saratoga when he served brilliantly with the Continentals against the British. At Saratoga Arnold was wounded in the left leg—hence the monument to that leg.

The monument was erected by Maj. Gen. Watts de Peyster, but because Arnold had proved himself a traitor by that time, his name could not appear on it. Instead, there is carved on it a Revolutionary cannon, a left boot, an epaulet, a wreath and this inscription:

In Memory of the "most brilliant soldier" of the Continental Army who was desperately wounded on this spot, the sally port of BURGOYNE'S "GREAT (WESTERN) REDOUBT"
7th October 1777, winning for his countrymen the Decisive Battle of the American Revolution and for himself the rank of Major General.

Paul Dean Pitches Cards to 4-to-1 Victory As Tigers Have 13 Men Left on Bases in Game

Park for the series debut of the 21-year-old Paul, and with each rise and dip of his long right arm, he approached a shut-out feat. One more strike, one more out, and a shut-out would have been his.

With two out in the ninth, the Tigers still runless, and the count two strikes on Big Hank Greenberg, the Detroit first baseman shot a tremendous triple to the centerfield fence, scored Jo-Jo White from first base and rudely cheated young Dean of his shut-out.

But St. Louis had another hero today, the familiar and irrepressible Pepper Martin whose World Series exploits seemingly are endless.

The swarthy, hawk-nosed Martin, his new uniform begrimed before the first inning was over, touched off the Cardinals' attack against lean Tommy Bridges, a frail fellow whose speed belies his stature.

Martin brought Bridges and the Tigers up sharply at the outset by blasting a triple to right field that became the first Cardinal run. Martin later bolstered young Dean's slender 2-to-0 lead in the fifth inning by hitting a double against the screen in right. Martin scored exactly half the Cardinal runs.

Pepper Crosses Bridges.

It was Bridges first World Series start and he had the misfortune to be pitted against the younger Dean. Those single runs he yielded in the first and second innings were too great a handicap, what with Dean permitting only one man to reach third base in the first eight innings.

Martin launched the attack that drove Bridges out of the game under a two-run barrage in the fifth and all too late the left-hander, Elon Hogsett, sauntered in to stop the Cardinals cold. Hogsett, the relieving hero of the opening game, permitted only one hit, and that a scratch affair, in the last four innings.

Young Dean was a consummate Tiger-tamer today. During the first six innings he permitted the Tigers but one hit an inning. At the moment he appeared to be weakening he showed his greatest strength. In the "clutches," as the ball players say, Paul was supreme, rudely jolting the Tigers' hopes of scoring on a half-dozen occasions.

The gangling lad from Holdenville, Okla., presented to the Tigers the same ominous spectacle that Brother Dizzy showed in the opening game. With the same long and deliberate wind-up, the younger Dean uncoiled his pitches with even greater speed than Dizzy. But the balls came up to the hitters with a side-arm motion in contrast to the elder Dean's overhand fling.

Dean Yields Eight Hits.

Not until the ninth did the Tigers put together a pair of the eight hits young Dean yielded. The others he scattered like leaves in the autumn wind.

Even as Hank Greenberg was the goat of the elder Dean in the opening game, the big Detroit first baseman was Paul's particular target today. In the third inning when the Tigers, by dint of a walk and a double by Gehringer with one out, threatening to wipe out his two-run lead, Paul struck out the Tiger slugger with a high, wide pitch that eluded Greenberg's swinging bludgeon by a half foot.

The Cardinals did not tarry with Bridges after Dean had turned the Tigers back in that first inning. The first batter, Pepper Martin, rocketed a triple over White's head against the screened pavilion and slid 20 feet on his midriff to reach third base safely. Rothrock promptly brought in the run with a fly to center field.

In the second inning the Cardinals got another run off Bridges. Jim Collins singled past Greenberg and Delancey moved him to third with a double to the screen in right center. Here Bridges filled the bases by whacking Orsatti on the back, but when Durocher, hitless thus far in the series, popped a foul to Greenberg, the situation eased.

But Bridges didn't escape. Paul Dean brought the second run home with a vicious line drive to White in right field and thus staked himself to a 2-0 lead.

In the earlier half of the second inning Dean extricated himself superbly from a menacing situation. Goose Goslin was on second with none out, the result of his flukey grounder that bounded over Frisch's head and then was muffed by Rothrock. Then Dean went to work. He retired Rogell on a short fly, hit Owen on the back of the neck, and forced Fox to pop to Martin. He ended the inning by slipping a third strike past Bridges.

But Dean was finding obstacles, too. Cochrane had walked and Gehringer's double to left had placed runners on second and third in the third inning when Dean found himself confronted with Greenberg. He struck the Tigers' big shot out to stop the rally.

From pitfall to pitfall, young Dean hopped, escaping a sad fate by sheer ability to bear down in the pinches. The fourth inning found the usual Tiger hit occurring, a single by Fox past Martin. Then Dean lapsed to the extent of walking the weak-hitting Bridges to place two men on bases, but he slammed through a fast ball that White could only pop to the catcher and the tension lessened. It was tightened again when Dean passed Cochrane to fill the bases, bringing the dangerous Gehringer up, but Gehringer grounded out weakly to Frisch.

In the fifth the Tigers for the third consecutive inning placed the tying runs on base with one out and for the third consecutive inning the amazing Dean repulsed them. The Tigers' threat on this occasion consisted of a walk by Greenberg and a single by Rogell that sent him to third, but young Mr. Dean took a hitch in his belt, settled down and caused sighs of relief by striking out both Marvin Owen and Pete Fox.

Thus did he turn back the Tigers. But his Cardinal mates were held in check by Bridges from the second inning until the fifth. Then they proceeded to clinch the ball game.

Rothrock Slams Triple.

Martin opened the inning by driving a double to right and romped home when Rothrock boomed a triple to left that landed between Goslin and the foul line. When Frankie Frisch bounced an infield hit over the upstretched hands of Gehringer to bring Rothrock home with the fourth run, Manager Cochrane called for Hogsett to replace Bridges.

And with Hogsett holding the Cards to a lone hit in those last four innings, it was necessary for Dean to nurse his lead tenderly. That he did, permitting a single in the sixth, turning the Tigers back hitless in the seventh and eighth, and still reaching for his shutout in the ninth.

But Jo-Jo White led off the inning with a single to right. Dean disposed of Cochrane and Gehringer on pop-ups, but Greenberg's triple delivered the Tigers from the ignominy of a runless day. It was their lone measure of consolation against this Dean fellow, who hadn't thrown a baseball in the big leagues until last April.

Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP).—If Barney Ross defends his lightweight championship against Tony Canzoneri in November or December, the fight will be held in Chicago, Sam Pian, the speaking member of Ross' management, said today he had turned down an offer guaranteeing $30,000 for a title bout with Canzoneri in Madison Square Garden.

National Golf Stars Tee Off Today

Kenwood Open Championship Calls for 54 Holes for $2,000 Purse.

MEN whose names have been synonymous with golf for the past decade, and a goodly sprinkling of dashing youngsters who have come up with a rush during the past few years, will converge on Kenwood's course today.

They will be part of the 100 players who will be seeking a lusty slice of the $2,000 prize money offered in the fourth National Capital Open championship.

Fifty-four holes are scheduled, but only 18 will be played today. The remaining 36 are slated tomorrow.

Play Rain or Shine.

The weather man predicted rain, but the pros and amateurs were not worried in the least. Some of them experienced a thorough drenching yesterday in the final tune-up rounds, and admitted that the rain merely made them battle all the harder. A few of the veterans recalled the time Walter Hagen scampered home in 32 during a storm that broke loose in the National Open a few years ago. "If Walter can do it, we can," is what some of them said.

Walter Hagen, a doubtful entry from the start, wired Al Houghton, host pro, yesterday from Detroit that he had business in Washington on Monday and would try to be here for the start today. Whiffy Cox and Jimmy Hines arrived on the scene yesterday but decided to forego practice rounds because of the rain.

Runyan Fails to Show Up.

Only a few of the famous golfers who have filed entries for the championship failed to appear yesterday. Paul Runyan, defending champion, was not present, and there was some doubt as to whether he would show up. Bill Mehlhorn, the Louisville pro, who showed up late in the afternoon, explained that Runyan was one of seven players who had been inoculated for the forthcoming barnstorming tour of Australia, and that he was probably too busy to show up for the practice rounds. Runyan, National P. G. A. champion, was among the first to file his entry with check, and Host Pro Al Houghton will bet his life that "Little Poison" will be present.

Willie MacFarlane, the tall, bespectacled Tuckahoe, N. Y., Scot, who won the 1931 National Capital Open, spent the day at the Kenwood Club, but refrained from any practice because of the rain. MacFarlane won first prize money of $2,500 in the Miami Biltmore classic last winter and hopes to regain his National Capital laurels.

McFarlane Off at 1:45.

MacFarlane is paired with Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn, and Johnny Hines, of New York, at 1:45 p. m.

Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee's "Melodrama Kid," who shot a 65 in the St. Paul Open a few months ago after tying with Ky Laffoon, got in nine holes yesterday, as did Clarence Clark, the Bloomfield, N. J., bomber.

Revolta is paired with Willie Goggin and Jack Forrester, Bobby Cruickshank's partners are Ed Dudley and Clark—a hot threesome.

Walter Kozak, of Flushing, Long Island, is paired with Roger Peacock, District amateur star, and the veteran Tommy Kerrigan, of Mount Vernon, N. Y. Charlie Lacey, of New York, who arrived at the club early yesterday, will tee off with Felix Serafin and Willie Klein. Lacey, English-born professional, was one of the stars of the first day of the National Open at Merion.

Mehlhorn Leaves Sick Bed.

At 1:30 Al Houghton, Joe Turnesa and John Golden will tee off. Golden is a former North and South champion and a dangerous money player.

Mehlhorn, just out of a sick bed with a fancy case of influenza, was uncertain whether he would start the grind. He said he had a slight fever. "Wild Bill" is another good money player and may pull a Dutra by winning the title.

Among the last-minute entrants were Tony Manero, of Greensboro, N. C., Open champion of North Carolina, and Jack Patroni, New Rochelle, N. Y., pro.

More than 700 tickets already have been reported sold, and several thousand are expected to follow the noted players today and tomorrow. First-prize money is $600. Par for the course is 34-36—70.

Revised and Additional Pairings.

9, Toby Tyler (Kenwood), Olen Spender (Baltimore), G. J. Reilly (Washington); 9:30, N. E. Frost (Columbia), Fred McLeod (Columbia), Bob Barnett (Chevy Chase); 11:10, Alfred Jamison (Washington), Clyde A. Fisher (Quantico), William Pendegrast (Manoakburn); 11:25, Andy Stanosky (New Jersey), Art Starcut (New Jersey), John Bishop (New Jersey); 12:40, John Bass (Baltimore), John Carpenter (Pittsburgh), John Shorey (Kenwood); 12:45, Jack Patroni (New Jersey), Mike Turnesa (New York), George Diffenbaugh (Indian Spring); 12:50, Ray Flemine (Washington), Francis Kelly (New York), James Lee (Connecticut); 1:45, Willie MacFarlane (New York), Whiffy Cox (New York), Jimmy Hines (New York); 1:50, Bill Mehlhorn (New York), Tony Manero (New York).

Harrisonburg Crushes Shenandoah High, 55-0

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—Harrisonburg High ran wild on a soggy field and in a driving rain today to crush Shenandoah High, 55 to 0.

All except one of the Harrisonburg touchdowns were scored on runs ranging from 20 to 50 yards. Helbert accounted for four of the scores, Wine, three, and Higgins, two. Helbert and Higgins each ran 50 yards for touchdowns.

Western Beats Alexandria, 6 to 0

Local Gridders March 80 Yards for Lone Tally in Final Period.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—An 80-yard march in the final period gave Western High School a 6-to-0 victory over Alexandria High's strong eleven here today.

Bulwarked by a big and fast-charging forward wall, the visitors proceeded to fight off an Alexandria scoring challenge in the first period, battle the home team on even terms for the next two, and finally came through in the closing minutes with a drive from its own 20-yard line for the winning touchdown.

The veteran backs of the Alexandria team, Jack Varney and Paul Shu, had Western on the defensive for most of the first half. On one offensive in particular, this hard-driving pair took the ball well into Western territory, where Lee Fones tossed a pass to Shu, who made a hard catch at top speed and sped on to the 8-yard line before he was downed.

Varney and Shu, however, were unable to make any appreciable impression in their attacking roles at this point, and after each had taken the ball twice for a net gain of 2 yards, Western took the ball on downs and kicked out of danger. The Western line exhibited empressive defensive strength.

Jack Hasley and Bill Summerbell alternated in the Western scoring march, with Hasley and Summerbell biting off distance in sharp, decisive smashes in which the forwards were driving the Alexandria line back gradually but effectively. Western finally made a first down on the 3-yard line, but Alexandria held Hasley to less than a yard on two plays. Summerbell, however, plowed through for another yard, and on fourth down plunged over the line for the deciding points. Hasley missed the extra-point attempt.

Charles Town High Defeats Leesburg

Charles Town, W. Va., Oct. 5 (Spl.).—The Charles Town High School football team opened their season on Memorial Field here today, outclassing the heavier Leesburg High School eleven, 20 to 0. Leesburg kicked off to the local boys and, after a series of fumbles, the Charles Town team gained possession of the pigskin. The local team made 14 first downs to two for Leesburg High.

Tech Swamps Episcopal High, 26-0

1,200 Watch Maroons Far Outclass Rivals on Muddy Field.

By John R. Vesburgh.

THE crushing power of another mighty Tech gridiron machine cast its shadow impressively over Washington high school football yesterday as the big Maroon eleven flattened a strong Episcopal High team, 26 to 0, in Tech Stadium.

Facing the finest combination Episcopal has put on a field in many a year, the well-coached Techmen surprised even their most enthusiastic supporters by flashing a running and passing attack which had the Virginia team fighting desperately merely to keep the score down.

1,200 See Game.

A crowd of 1,200 sat throughout a steady drizzle to watch the Manual Trainers go into action in their own stadium for the second time in its five-year history.

Only during the first quarter and part of the second was Episcopal able to keep the Tech juggernaut shackled. The storm broke early in the second period, when Tech began a steady march from its own 25-yard line, which ended with George Bogan, Tech's wing-footed half back, sweeping left end 15 yards for a touchdown. Pete Alley place-kicked the extra point.

Alley Nabs Pass.

The Tech scoring attack began to click again in a few moments later. Alley brought this second drive to a successful close by nabbing a pass from Blackie Heatwole on Episcopal's 20-yard line and shaking off half a dozen tacklers to go for a touchdown. His place-kick attempt was blocked.

Big Reds Daly, Tech tackle, blocked a punt deep in Episcopal territory in the third quarter to lead up to the third touchdown. Heatwole made the score, going wide around right end after taking a lateral pass from Alley on the 7-yard line. Alley's kick was good for the extra point.

Wells Intercepts Pass.

A brilliant run by a young sophomore on the first play of his life in a regular game accounted for the final score. Stanley Wells, in the game less than a minute at half back, intercepted an Episcopal pass in the last quarter on the enemy's 27-yard line and twisted his way along the side-line for the fourth touchdown. Daly missed the place-kick attempt.

Tech's first successful scoring drive opened with Hart going wide for 5 yards to his own 30 after Episcopal had punted from its own 35. Paul Lynch, another track speedster like Bogan, got loose for 25 around left-end. After Heatwole gained 3 yards, Lynch went for 19 more. Alley made 11 on two spinners and the ball was on the 15-yard line. Heatwole's long pass to Emmerich was wide. Bogan went in for Lynch. On the first play, Bogan went around left end for a touchdown on a reverse behind beautiful interference.

Run Is Masterpiece.

Heatwole preceded his pass to Alley for the second touchdown by galloping 14 yards on first down after an Episcopal punt had been downed on the Episcopal 44. Alley's scornig run after catching the pass was a masterpiece of side-stepping and high-knee action which left a swarm of would-be tacklers sprawled in his wake.

Daly just missed getting a touchdown when he blocked Hoxton's punt in the third period, falling on the ball on the 1-yard line. A penalty put the ball back on the 6, but after Tech had failed to gain on two plays Alley tossed a well-timed lateral wide to Heatwole, who trotted over for the score.

Toolbox, $5 Favorite, Defeats Maryland-Bred Juveniles in Feature Race at Laurel

Labrot's Colt Gives Stable Double

Trainer Irvine Saddles 2 Winners; Reported to Have Resigned.

By Walter Haight.

If reports are true that Bill Irvine, trainer for the S. W. Labrot Stable, resigned his post yesterday, he certainly completed several years of duty with that establishment in a blaze of glory. Irvine saddled two of the day's principal winners. They were Toolbox, in the feature, and Toytime, in the second. The last named was the longest shot of the day, at a $21.90 mutuel.

S. W. Labrot, the Annapolis sportsman, likes nothing better than to assert the superiority of his stable over other Maryland breeders. He must have eaten a hearty dinner last night, for it was a 5½-furlong dash for State-bred juveniles in which Toolbox chiseled his victory. Running with a stablemate, Peeper, which failed to figure in the important parts of the race, Toolbox was installed the favorite and paid a $5 mutuel. The track was fast at this stage of the afternoon despite the drizzle, and the Labrot representative ran the distance in 1:07 1-5.

Difference in Styles.

Both Toolbox and Toytime were foaled by the mare Toyself, but there was a difference in their styles of racing yesterday.

With little Jimmy Hunter in the saddle, Toolbox broke at the head of the second division as Mantados and Gunwale battled for the doubtful pace-setting honor. However, Hunter soon had Toolbox close up to the front pair and this combination moved up with a rush entering the stretch. Toolbox soon gained the lead and Hunter took no chances. He gave his mount a powerful ride right up to the finish line. Gunwale hung on for the place, a length and a half away and the same margin ahead of Truly Yours.

On the other hand, Toytime fairly shot out of the starting gate to stay in front throughout under a hustling ride by Jockey W. D. Wright. Wright rode harder and harder as the finished loomed and it is well that he did for Coya, a 97-1 shot, decided to put on a Garrison finish. It was by a margin of a neck that Toytime clung to the decision.

F. Ambrose Clark's Red Flash, paying $4.20, galloped to a handy victory in the 2-mile Longwood Steeplechase, for maidens. The Clark jumper fenced faultlessly, throwing off challenges from Bad Bob and Lei to win by a length and a half under mild urging. Lei was second and Rozell third. Bad Bob stumbled at the thirteenth fence, tossing Jockey I. Wren and rolling on the prostrate rider. The latter was removed from the course in an ambulance.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRILLFALON, $5.80, $4.20, $3.20; BUY STRAIGHT (field), $4.80, $3.20; ALWINTOUR, $6.30.

BRILLFALON, away well but lacking speed to hold a forward position in the first half-mile, was kept on the outside for clear racing room, and then closed fast in the stretch drive to get up in the last 50 yards. BUY STRAIGHT raced in the thick of contention from the beginning and fought it out resolutely after making repeated efforts. ALWINTOUR maintained a brief lead in the first five furlongs, saved ground throughout, and held on determinedly. WHITE GINGER was close up from the start and continued courageously. CHINESE INDIAN followed close to the leaders and had no excuses. BY SURPRISE was shuffled back early. OUR CHANCE could not enter into contention. COURT GOSSIP was held safe. COLORIST stopped. TRIPLE STAR had speed in the opening furlongs.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:08. Off at 2:08½. Winner, S. W. Labrot's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOYTIME, $21.90, $10.20, $7.20; COYA, $44.40, $23.10; MINTON, $12.30.

TOYTIME, hustled to the front at once, was steadied until reaching the home stretch, then held on stoutly under a drive to withstand COYA. Latter, in nearest pursuit of the winner, made tenacious efforts in the closing stages and was saddling steadily on the inside. MINTON went prominently up the stretch but was going tamely at the end. POSTSCRIPT, slow to begin, worked her way up on the outside and finished stoutly. DIS DAT could not threaten the leaders. LAST ROMANCE was held safe. JUDGE SCHILLING was allowed to race on his own courage early and then was steered very wide at the stretch turn. He raced far below his true form and can do better.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000. The Longwoods Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward; maidens. Start good and fast. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:36. Off at once. RED FLASH, taken into command at the second fence, was steadied to his fences thereafter, stalled off strong efforts from BAD BOB, and then held LEI safe when asked to ride in the last half-mile. LEI, reserved off the pace, moved up stoutly going to the twelfth fence, swung to the outside of the winner, but failed to better his speed in the closing stages. ROZELL, rated for the first turn of the field, worked her way up on the outside to enter contention, but was never able to reach the leaders. MAGNUM was always far back. LASSITUDE II began tiring after a mile. BIG TIP tired badly. BAD BOB threatened seriously at the ninth fence, but fell at the thirteenth.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAKERS DOZEN, $4.80, $3.80, $2.70; RUSTIC REST, $4.60, $3.50; †ADVOCATE JUNIOR, $3.80.

BAKERS DOZEN moved around the early leaders with a rush to take command at the turn and opened up a winning lead when straightened into the home stretch, but tired approaching the finish and just lasted to withstand RUSTIC REST. Latter, forwardly placed and saving ground early, swung to the outside at the stretch turn and finished wearing the winner down at every stride. ADVOCATE JUNIOR was used up chasing TELL IT and forcing the early pace. He tired fast during the final furlong. SANDY BELLE improved her position steadily after a slow beginning and continued to make up ground at the finish. MY WISH closed with a rush after being slow to settle in her stride. STOOL PIGEON lacked his usual early speed. He closed some ground in the late stages when finishing wide. SUN VESTAL was never able to enter contention. CANTERCHORD stopped. TELL IT was done after a brief flash of early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Marothy. For 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:06. Winner, S. W. TOOLBOX moved up fast to take command entering the home stretch, was kept under strong pressure and held GUNWALE safe. Latter, stoutly handled from the beginning, continued courageously after being displaced. TRULY YOURS held to a position on the inside, luckily found racing room, but could not threaten during the stretch drive. ORTHOPRISM finished full of run on the outside. PEEPER showed a promising effort for his first start. JOBAKHETA was slow in settling in his stride. MEMORABLE broke slowly.

BAND WAGON saved ground while meeting stiff contention from BALLY BAY and, holding on willingly under a strong drive, barely lasted long enough. BALLY BAY, a strong factor from the beginning, made repeated early efforts and then fought it out desperately approaching the finish. MISS CAREFUL, racing close to the leaders, came determinedly at the end. BUBBLESOME, sluggish for the opening furlong, settled down and made up ground steadily. PRINCE WICK was overmatched.

INFERNO LAD responded stoutly for the final drive and then outstayed FLUFFY LEE after gaining a slight lead. FLUFFY LEE went strongly from the beginning, saved ground after meeting a bold effort from RESURRECTION, then held on stoutly. RESURRECTION, after slipped through on inside to make a strong bid at stretch turn, dropped back and came again at the end. SINGLE STRIPE, in hand early, flattened out when put to a drive. THREE DAGGERS and DUNFERN were outrun.

Stocks Climb 1.4 Points as Activity Gains

Trading Volume Increases to 872,190 Shares in Bullish Session.

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—Bullish urges stirred financial markets today and stocks stepped out of a rut into a lively advance.

Trading in stocks was the most active since August 22. Turnover totaled 872,190 shares compared with 607,385 in the preceding session.

Motor, merchandise, liquor and other industrial groups were in brisk demand for a while but the advance met resistance as it approached the tops of the rally last week. The market reverted to a drift which continued to the close. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks rose 1.4 points to 71.5.

Better Feeling Evident.

Better feeling was evident in most markets. Bonds moved forward for moderate gains, United States Government issues holding firm. The dollar maintained its gain against foreign exchanges and commodities settled down to a calmer course.

In the absence of specific news to explain the upturn, brokers attributed improvement in sentiment chiefly to indications that the Administration was shifting away from policies of price-fixing and production control.

Wall street took its latest cue in that respect from the address of Donald Richberg, head of the Industrial Emergency Committee of the NRA, before the National Press Club.

The California stocks under pressure in the preceding session rallied as shorts, noting the better tone of the market, covered commitments.

List of Gainers.

Safeway Stores, California Packing, Standard Oil of California, Southern Pacific and Union Oil regained fractions to more than a point of their losses.

In fairly active trading, Chrysler, General Motors, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Montgomery Ward, Electric Autolite, National Distillers, Air Reduction, corn products and Columbian Carbon sold up for net gains of 1 to about 2 points.

Some of the low-priced amusement and merchandise shares were bought in sizeable blocks, McLellan stores common moving up more than a point on a large turnover.

Decline in Pound Starts Rumor Of Plan to Stabilize With Dollar

British Chancellor of Exchequer Denies Pegging Move Is Near; Sterling Drop Stirs Conjectures; U. S. Monetary Policy May Delay Parity Action.

By Anna P. Youngman.

More than three years have elapsed since Great Britain left the gold standard in September, 1931. Since that time the value of the pound in terms of dollars has ranged from $3.15, the low point reached at the end of November, 1932, to $5.51, the high point attained in November, 1933.

At present the pound is quoted at $4.92, following a prolonged and recently accelerated decline. With this near approach to the old dollar-pound parity of $4.8665, recurrent rumors of an intention to stabilize the two currencies at their former gold ratio have been heard. However, the British chancellor of the Exchequer put a quietus upon such reports a few days ago in an address in which he intimated that stabilization was no nearer than a year ago.

The sudden and pronounced decline in the value of the pound has been the subject of conjectures concerning the cause of the downward movement. Some believe that the British have welcomed the drop and facilitated it passively if not actively. Others maintain that earlier supporting operations have been extremely costly and that withdrawal has been forced. Again, it is surmised that the British may be actively engaged in depressing the value of the pound by buying dollars. Another explanation advanced for the weakness of sterling is the fact that the Britain merchandise trade balance is more unfavorable than it was a year ago. That may mean that the balance of payments is running against Great Britain, and increasing the pressure upon sterling, which has also been affected by seasonal factors.

Gauge of Pound Lacking.

Whatever the causes of weakness may be—and there is no way of determining the facts—it is evident that no generally acceptable standards exist by which to decide whether the pound is too high or too low in relation to the dollar and other gold currencies.

When stabilization proposals were being discussed prior to the London Monetary Conference, in the summer of 1933, the question was frequently asked as to what was the "real" value of the pound in terms of dollars. The London Economist made certain elaborate calculations and concluded that sterling ought to be quoted at $3.60, on the basis of prices prevailing in April, 1933. On the other hand some American estimates fixed the value of the pound at $5.80. This figure was obtained by assuming that, with the pound 31 per cent below par, the dollar would have to rise to $5.80 if the United States intended to elevate domestic prices to the 1926 level. Of course, the situation has radically changed since that time. The gold value of the dollar has been reduced to 59.06 cents, and the depreciation of sterling has progressed, keeping pace with dollar devaluation. Meantime, American wholesale prices have advanced nearly 30 per cent since March, 1933, while English prices have shown a comparatively slight increase.

When both the United States and Great Britain are ready to effect a stabilization agreement, it seems evident that the exchange ratio will have to be determined without much regard for what either nation thinks it ought to be or rather wants it to be. It would be ironical if after all these years of experimentation and jockeying for the trading advantages supposed to be derived from currency depreciation, the United States and Great Britain should again find themselves reverting to the former parities of exchange. However, the old ratio would be reestablished under very different conditions because depreciated pounds and devalued dollars now have very different exchange values in terms of gold currencies and in terms of the currencies of other countries quoted at widely varying discounts from their former gold pars.

Provisional Facts Possible.

So long as the United States reserves the right to devalue the dollar further, and so long as there is a possibility of an inflationary advance of American prices, any stabilization agreement reached with Great Britain would necessarily be provisional. The British reluctance to stabilize is due in part to uncertainty regarding our monetary policy, and there is the complicating factor of war debts in the background. In fact, one reason suggested as a cause of the present drop in the pound is a growing belief that a price rise in this country which would reduce the competitive value of an undervalued exchange dollar is not in immediate prospect. Consequently, the British are inclined to welcome a further drop in the pound to strengthen their trading position.

Another and most serious complication would arise to hamper stabilization agreements if the gold bloc countries were to give up their struggle to maintain their overvalued currencies on a gold basis. The recent decline in sterling has increased the strain upon these countries and strengthened the sentiment in favor of devaluation. With political difficulties in France always threatening to precipitate a flight from the franc, and the lesser nations of the gold bloc increasingly restive in face of the obstacles to exporting arising from currency depreciation, there is an ever-present danger that the gold standard may be abandoned by its remaining adherents. In any case, the constant fluctuations in the dollar and the pound upon which, directly or indirectly, the value of the currencies of other nations depend is a cause of perpetual disturbance to the entire world. Until an end is put to these currency disorders, which are misnamed currency "management," the hindrances to an expansion of foreign trade will remain and little progress will be made toward effecting freer exchange of goods through commercial agreements.

U. S. Stocks of Lead.

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—Stocks of lead in the United States on September 1 totaled 313,172 short tons against 310,164 on August 1 and 257,026 on September 1, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Bonds Regain Optimism in Moderate Rise

Federals Still Improve as Sales Total Climbs to $13,458,000.

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—The bond market regained some of its optimism today coincident with a substantial rally in stocks and further improvement in U. S. Government securities.

Dealers were encouraged by the fact that volume picked up on the advance. Transfers totaled $13,458,000, par value, against $11,151,000 yesterday.

Federal issues accounted for some $5,730,000 of the aggregate compared with $4,770,000 in the previous session. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans held an advance of three-tenths of a point at 83.6, its first of the week.

NRA News Aids.

Advices from Washington that the NRA was considering abandoning price-fixing and drastic code enforcement seemed to improve the investment temper.

While there was some profit-taking in the Governments because of their recent steady advance, gains of one thirty-second to ten thirty-seconds of a point predominated in this list. Only the two Federal Farm issues and Liberty Fourth 4¼s eased. Home Loan 4s were unchanged and the 2¾s and 3s were slightly higher.

The rails led the corporate divisions. Carrier gainers of 1 to around 2 points included some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, St. Paul, Erie, Louisville & Nashville, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Pere Marquette, Southern Pacific and Southern.

Utilities and Industrials.

Among the utilities and industrials, smaller advances were the rule. Childs Co. 5s, however, got up 3¼ points, to 50¾; Hudson Coal 5s were up 1, at 44½; International Hydro-Electric 6s firmed 1⅜, at 49¾; Pacific Gas 5s moved up 1, to 103½.

Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron were 1 higher, at 63; Portland General Electric 4½s improved 1½, at 47, and Warner Bros. 6s recovered 1¼, at 61¼.

In the foreign division, obligations of Argentina, Australia, Chile, Peru and Germany advanced fractionally to a point or so.

Curb Registers Advancement; Volume Lags

Specialty List Makes Best Gains; Sales Total 99,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—The curb market moved a little higher today. Advances of fractions to around a point were registered in virtually all sections of the list. Volume continued small.

Gossip of New York Markets

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—The major domestic air transport lines are expected by security analysts to show only moderate improvement in the second half of the year over their poor earnings results in the first six months.

Reduced air mail postage, extension of services and the use of faster planes probably will tend to increase mail receipts and reduce per-mile costs of transport lines, but the sharply lower awards for Government mail contracts are expected to prevent any great improvement in revenues.

The three leading systems operating within the United States secured about $8,500,000 in mail pay in the first half of 1933, but only about $2,500,000 in the January-June term of this year, according to Standard Statistics Co. These payments ceased for several months, and average rates under last spring's temporary mail contracts were nearly one-fourth lower than the year before.

In the first half of the year, the three major systems succeeded in expanding their passenger miles flown by 17 per cent and their express poundage by 39 per cent, while the number of passengers carried declined by 3 per cent. Lower operating costs and the increase in non-mail income failed to make up for the drastic drop in mail revenues.

Combined net losses of three systems during the first half year are placed at around $3,500,000 by Standard Statistics, against net profits of more than $500,000 in the 1933 period. A substantial change is not looked for until the Federal Aviation Commission reports and Congress acts on its finding, probably not this year.

Wheat Values Score Material Fresh Gains

Liberal New Export Trade in Canada Is Leading Aid to Rise.

Chicago, Oct. 6 (AP).—Invigorated by liberal new export business in Canadian wheat and by strength of securities at New Yark, grain values scored material fresh advances today.

Cables said tremendous forced wheat market liquidation from Europe appeared to be finished, and added that holdings of cash wheat abroad were believed to be in strong hands now, with indications of a gradual advance of prices.

It was estimated 1,000,000 bushels or more of wheat from Canada had been bought today for shipment overseas, and there were also reports considerable domestic hard winter wheat could be moved out of Chicago shortly to the East.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat closed firm, ⅜ to 1 cent over yesterday's finish; December new, 97⅞@⅛; corn, ⅜ to ¾ up; December new, 74⅛@75; oats, ½ to 1 cent advanced, and provisions showing 25 to 32 cents gain.

At first the Chicago wheat market tended to sag, responsive to temporary weakness of wheat quotations at Liverpool and because of attention given to a statement by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace suggesting that wheat prices should be allowed to sink to a Liverpool level.

Quick advances, though, took place later, paralleling a display of strength in the New York Stock Market and in cotton. A further stimulus to wheat values came from estimates that 2,000,000 barrels or more of flour had been disposed of by domestic mills since December wheat in Chicago had dipped to below $1 a bushel.

On the basis of 4½ bushels of wheat to a barrel of flour business in domestic flour the past week would be equal to 9,000,000 bushels of wheat, and there were reports of further flour sales today.

Wheat Sold as Flour.

A Nebraska mill was said to have sold around 300,000 bushels of wheat today as flour. On the other hand, big shipments of wheat from Argentina continued, totaling 4,446,000 bushels this week, against 3,785,000 a week ago, and only 815,000 the corresponding time last year.

Corn and oats fluctuated in line with wheat. Offerings of corn to arrive were small.

Provisions made a stiff advance owing largely to upturns of hog values and of grains.

Auto Output Points to Rise Of World Trade

United States Registers Gain in Exports; Europe Makes More Cars.

By Alexander R. George.
(Associated Press.)

In view of the increased production of motor cars in European countries, such as Great Britain and Germany, the big gains registered this year in exports of American automotive products is considered an encouraging indicator of improved world economic conditions.

Shipments of American passenger cars, trucks and sundry other motor car products during the first six months of 1934 exceed in value the exports during all of 1933.

Foreign demand, while not as heavy as in the spring, continued to hold up well during the summer.

German Output Increases.

Contrary to predictions and the fact that there usually is a seasonal summer slump, German motor vehicle factories continued to increase production during the second quarter of the year. In the first half of 1934, Reich automobile production was twice the total of the similar 1933 period.

There has been a boom in the British motor car business this year, although the increasing popularity of the small, low horsepower automobile resulted in a marked decline in the sale of motorcycles. There has been a notable revival, however, in the bicycle industry in Great Britain and other countries.

Improved economic conditions in Great Britain, Australia, the Union of South Africa, Japan and Argentina have been important factors in the increase of automotive shipments from the United States. In recent months South Africa has been the leading market for American passenger cars, followed by Australia, the United Kingdom, Japan and Argentina.

Tire Trade Increases.

The United States has been getting an increasing share of the international tire trade. Exports of automobile tires from this country in the first half of the year registered a volume gain of 28 per cent over the corresponding 1933 period. Total world exports showed a very slight gain in the same period.

Reports by affiliated motor clubs to the American Automobile Association indicate that 1934 has been the best touring year since 1928, according to association officials. It is estimated touring increased 20 per cent over 1933, while expenditures per tourist increased 25 per cent.

Canada, California, the American Northwest, New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan got a big share of increased travel, the Middle West regions being adversely affected by drought conditions. There was a 60 per cent increase in the number of cars entering Yellowstone Park, which usually is an index of travel conditions as regards National parks, National forests and reservations.

Walt Mason Himself

Character.

J. Puncheon Blix got in a jam, he passed a quarter made of tin; the agents, then, of Uncle Sam, surrounded him and ran him in. For counterfeiting is a crime that occupies a class alone; a man must serve a lot of time in prison if his guilt is shown. And all the minions of the law in solemn majesty uprear; they'd gladly see the halter draw on one who's shoving of the queer. James Puncheon Blix had always stood a shining and a glowing light; he was so moral and so good that ribald voters voiced their spite. "We always knew he was a fraud," they said, when he was borne to jail; "he scolded Mike and lectured Maud, for being sinful, vain and frail. If men indulged in harmless larks, and quaffed the bowl in wayside inns, James Puncheon made a few remarks, rebuking them for deadly sins. He was too good, upon us all high righteousness he would enjoin, and now he'll wear a chain and ball, since he's been shoving phony coin." Thus people talked who scorn the right, who have no use for virtue's ways, who view with hatred and with spite the pure and loftyminded jays. The ribald voters always yell with vicious and profane delight, when some good man is, for a spell, the victim of a missent blight. J. Puncheon's neighbors rallied round, such accusations made them sick; they knew he was too good and sound to pull so villainous a trick. And soon before the justice grim he proved his character was white; a lawyer passed the coin to him, and he supposed it was all right.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Neighborly Worry — By Harry J. Tuthill

DID YOU TALK WITH OUR NEW NEIGHBORS JO?
THIS MORNING WHILE DUSTING, I HEARD HER TALKING TO THAT NOSY WOMAN DOWNSTAIRS, BUT WHEN I FIXED MY HAIR AND GOT OUT IN THE HALL THEY WERE GONE.
LATER WHEN THE POSTMAN GOT HERE, I FOUND OUT THEIR NAME IS KARAMBA
KARAMBA? THAT'S WHAT A MEXICAN SAYS WHEN HE HITS HIS THUMB WITH A HAMMER.
HE MAY BE MEXICAN, THEY'RE VERY HOT-TEMPERED
A MAN WITH A HIGH TEMPER GENERALLY SHOWS IT ON MOVING DAY. HE DIDN'T RAISE HIS VOICE ONCE TODAY. INSTEAD, HE WALKED AROUND WITH A SMILE. A PLEASANT SMILE, TOO.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 10-6
KARAMBA! WELL, YOU CAN'T TELL ANYTHING BY THE NAME. ONE OF THE TOUGHEST NEIGHBORS I EVER TANGLED WITH WAS NAMED LAMB.
I KNOW WE'LL LIKE THOSE FOLKS. AND WE'LL MAKE IT OUR BUSINESS TO CALL ON THEM BEFORE THE OTHER TENANTS HERE POISON THEIR MIND ABOUT US. YES SIR, AT LAST WE HAVE REAL NEIGHBORS.

THEY APPARENTLY WANT ME TO GOVERN THEM. I GUESS I'LL MAKE ANOTHER SPEECH. THEY LIKED THE LAST. I LIKE MAKING SPEECHES. MAYBE YOU'D CARE TO MAKE ONE?
OH NO THANKS. I WUNT KNOW WHAT T'TALK ABOUT.
VERY WELL. AND THEN WE'LL GO AND SEE IF THERE'S ANYTHING IN THE ICE BOX. WE'VE BEEN SO BUSY WE FORGOT TO EAT.

Paris to End Quota Plan; U.S. Gain Seen

Import Curb to Be Dropped Next Month.

Paris, Oct. 5 (AP).—The United States is expected to increase its trade with France as a result of the latter nation's announcement today of intention to abandon the import quota system November 1.

Although tariffs probably will be higher under the new unlimited-entry system, importers say they will sell more American goods than they were allowed to import under the small quotas.

Benefits to the United States also include clarification of a hitherto confused procedure. It was recalled that whenever France changed her duties during the last year, simultaneously the United States was deprived of the benefits of the minimum rates she enjoyed and was put on maximum schedules. In some cases the United States returned to the minimum position after embassy protests.
